It's Going Nicely Count the Fights Soon They Separate How About Money?

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Well, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, the loving conference at Washington is progressing as well as could be expected. Not more than six or seven new international animosities have been brought to a head by the conference.

To know what happens read all the news articles and strike an average. Reporters try to give facts. Pay little attention to editorial writers. Those gentlemen start with a theory and spend the rest of the time trying to vindicate it.

Glance over a newspaper that thinks it's a League of Nations paper. On one page in one edition of the New York Times you get these lines in big type:

Italy Jealous of France.

Secret Propaganda Calls Japan Victim.

Accuses Great Britain and America.

Japan Must Submit or Fight Both.

Curzon Warns France Headed for Disaster.

Chinese Aroused to Press Claims.

Turn over, please, and read, in a cable from London: "Aska Wells to stop anti-French cables."

Wells came here just bubbling over with peace. "Peace or chaos" was his motto. He heard one speech by Briand and promptly changed his cry to "France is planning a war with England." And Northcliffe's Daily Mail, which can see a war as far ahead as anybody, cables Wells, "If you don't stop writing so bitterly about France, we'll stop printing your articles."

It is, however, a useful conference. From it all Americans, including the President, may learn that the only nation we can count on, the only nation with which we should have any intimate relations, outside of commerce and friendship, is the United States.

Briand has gone home. His message was brief and plain. "We have met Germany several times, Napoleon pulled her teeth, but we met her again in 1870. Yet other nations still not promise to fight with us if war comes again, so we are going to keep ready for it." The French are practical.

The other delegates will all go home probably by the middle of December, and nothing will have been done except to reveal on this continent the hatreds blazing, or smouldering, in Europe. The French intend to kill their enemy neighbor, Germany, economically as well as it a military sense. This is shown by the order of a French general to destroy German factories that employ 200,000 workmen, and turn those men out to starve. The excuse for the destruction is that the factories to be torn down by men that work in them might be converted by the Germans into manufactories of ammunition and arms. Every factory could be used in that way, as we learned in the war. But, as the French fable says, "The argument of the strong is always the best," and France now has the strength. She will not be thwarted if she can help it, to her plan to destroy the neighbor that she dreads. France is practical, and having put behind her all possibility of conciliating her great enemy by clemency, her alternative is that enemy's complete destruction.

England, seeing in Germany only a manufacturing, trading rival, does not want her killed, only half killed, stupefied, while England picks up trade. Hence the row between England and France. "I don't want in middle Europe the decaying carcasses of two great nations, Germany and Austria. It's bad for Europe's health, and it's playing the game for Bolshevist Russia." So says England.

Japan has discovered, to her disgust, that England, in public, is not as proud of her little brown friend as she is in private. Japan is big and important as next door neighbor to India. But the U. S. A. is bigger and more important as next door neighbor to Canada, and especially as the nation with money to lend and money to buy goods. Japan, newly elected a member of the international club of the world, finds that there is a clique within the club membership, she is not in it, and that displeases her.

Italy suspects France and her reasons, on the surface, at least, are just as good as France's reasons for suspecting Germany. For one invasion of France by Germany there have been half a dozen invasions of Italy by France. Caesar, it is true, began it when he dragged Vercingetorix behind his chariot. But that does not console Italy. She knows that the art works you admire in Paris, including some fine horses, used to be in Italy. She does not like France's love of a nation when, just as useful for a trip over the Alps or through the tunnel as for a march beyond the Rhine. There are hatred and suspicion apt to be long lived.

It will be over soon and more interesting things will claim your attention. If anything real happens, it will happen to this country. The delegates came to see what could be done about their debts, about cancelling the old debts and making new debts. On one point, and no other, Europe is unanimous—AMERICA SHOULD NOT ASK TO BE PAID.

Braves Field, Nov. 26.—A great crowd greeted Boston College and Holy Cross as they lined up here today for their annual classic, which incidentally closed the eastern collegiate football season.

The big grandstand and pavilion were well filled up, and thousands were massed back of the ropes on the open side of the gridiron.

The field was in fair shape, as the sun did not come out to thaw the ground, after 500 gallons of gasoline had burnt off various small lakes. Footing was much better than it has been in the last couple of clashes of these great rivals.

Both teams came up for the game in fine condition, having confined their efforts of the past week to polishing off and resting up.

Boston College went into the game a favorite, due to the fine showing against Georgetown a week ago.

The Cavanaugh team has been improving steadily since a bad start, while the Purple sound, which looked like a million dollars early in the

SURPRISE SPRUNG BY ARBUCKLE

Nurse Tells How Virginia Rappe Tore Clothes in Former Attacks

By UNIVERSAL SERVICE.

San Francisco, Nov. 26.—A nurse, a friend, and a girlhood sweetheart talked to the Arbuckle jury about Virginia Rappe.

For four hours they dwelt on the physical characteristics of the dead girl and their testimony went to these two points:

1—That she had recurrent attacks of internal trouble causing her intense pain.

2—That, while undergoing these attacks it was her habit to tear off her clothes.

The most important witness of the day, as exclusively predicted by Universal Service, was Irene Morgan, of Los Angeles, who lived with Miss Rappe as a nurse for several months.

Miss Morgan has a Swedish accent, further complicated with a pronounced lisp, but she is of a determined temperament and created a sensation in the courtroom. Especially was this so when she revealed the fact that Detective Frank McConnell, attached to the San Francisco district attorney's office, had visited her in Los Angeles and attempted to dissuade her from testifying at this trial.

"Did anyone try to prevent you from coming to San Francisco?" asked Milton Cohen, of defense counsel.

"Yes, sir," said the witness, "Mr. McConnell."

"What did he say to you about it?"

Boston Woman Who Lost Suit to Prevent Being Divorced

MRS. BESSIE S. ELMAN.

Mrs. Bessie Schmidt Elman of Boston, wife of a wealthy Syracuse manufacturer, has lost her fight to prevent her husband from obtaining an absolute divorce he has been seeking for more than a year, and which has been one of the sensations of Syracuse and Boston, in both of which cities hearings have been held.

Mrs. Elman's counter charges that her husband had been guilty of misconduct with a Boston "cabaret canary" in 1916, have fallen flat, for the referee in the case, Frank H. Hodges, has found against her and has recommended that Elman be awarded the divorce he seeks.

Mrs. Elman is the mother of five grown children.

The finding of the referee automatically brings to a stop the payment of the $50 weekly alimony which Elman has been paying his wife.

The case now goes to Supreme Court Justice Irving R. Devendorf, of Syracuse, for confirmation, but Mrs. Elman's counsel has announced that he intends making a final effort to prevent the confirmation of the decree.

Elman filed suit for divorce more than a year ago and Mrs. Elman immediately countered with her charges. She alleges that Elman employed "a night out" with one Minnie Liebch, a Berwick Hotel cabaret entertainer in 1916. This was flatly denied by Elman.

The body of a woman, apparently about sixty years old, was found floating in the Muddy River near Audubon road, Back Bay, by Joseph McCullon, No. 39 Peterboro street, today.

The body was removed to the Southern Mortuary.

The police describe the woman as having been of light complexion, blue eyes, gray hair, and weighing about 150 pounds.

She was wearing a black dress, plush cape, black shoes and stockings, and a wedding ring, inscribed with the initials "D. C. T.—E. A. M., June 7, 1900."

Mrs. Stokes Is Seeking Permanent Alimony of $1,500 a Month

MRS. W. E. D. STOKES

New York, Nov. 26.—Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, who was granted $1,500 a month temporary alimony when W. E. D. Stokes started his celebrated divorce action against her in 1919, wants the alimony made permanent.

Moreover, she is likely to get it, for Justice Finch told her lawyer he considered the request a reasonable one. Counsel for Stokes was likewise informed of this attitude of the court, and, if Stokes has any objection to the arrangement by which he will pay Mrs. Stokes $1,500 a month indefinitely, he will be given a chance to voice it at a hearing in January.

Stokes did not get his divorce, it will be recalled, but Mrs. Stokes won a separation.

BANDITS FLEE WITH FACTORY PAYROLL

Four Armed Men and Guards Exchange Fusillade of Shots; One Gunman Wounded

Four armed bandits, said by some eye-witnesses to have been accompanied by a woman, held up the money car of the First National Bank of Boston at the corner of Beech and Spruce streets in Chelsea today, overcame the guards after an exchange of shots in which at least one of the robbers was wounded, and escaped with $28,444 in currency.

The money constituted the payroll of A. G. Walton & Co., at Beech and Spruce streets.

It was directly in front of the company office and as the bank messengers were about to deliver the three pouches containing the cash that the robbery took place.

Two hours after the bold aynght holdup a machine supposed to have been the bandit car careered madly through Broad street in East Weymouth, its four male occupants firing recklessly at the curious attracted to the sidewalk by their breakneck speed.

The machine disappeared in the direction of Weymouth proper, but, policemen on the trail of the desperadoes pointed out, it could have been turned

CANADIAN SALES TAX DATA READY FOR HEARST'S GUESTS

By Universal Service.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 26.—The Canadian public is entirely satisfied with the operations of the sales tax in the Dominion. Best proof of this is the fact that a change in prevailing methods of taxation here has not been made an issue in one of the bitterest political fights in the history of Canada, which will be decided in a general election December 6.

Keen students of economic conditions in the Canadian capital further express the belief that the sales tax principle in vogue in Canada must inevitably be applied to revenue production in the United States, as a substitute for the cumbrous American income tax.

Only by such change in American tax methods, it is held by Canadian officials, will the billions of dollars now tied up in tax exempt securities in the United States be released for industry.

Smoke curley through the entire building and the occupants were driven to the fire escapes. The smoke was too thick in lower by the first floor. About thirty families or 125 persons live in the building.

Firemen had difficulty mastering the flames because of the smoke, but with heavy streams of water they put it out in less than an hour.

MARINES BATTLE WITH SANTA CRUZ BANDITS

Buenos Aires, Nov. 26 (by the Associated Press).—Four hundred well-armed bandits entrenched in the village of Pase Blanco, in the State of Santa Cruz, repulsed an attack by the marines landed from the cruiser Almirante Brown, according to belated dispatches received here. A number of the bandits and marines were killed or wounded uring the engagement, in which the attacking men used machine guns. The bandits hold prisoners in the village an unknown number of the residents of the region, including English ranchers and S. J. MacBey, manager of the Armour packing plant near the town of Santa Cruz.

off toward Brockton at any of several turnouts.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN NEAR

Police throughout Eastern Massachusetts have been alarmed and are on the lookout for the fleeing robbers, who are fully armed, equipped with a big, fast car, and determined.

Owing to the excitement and confusion which followed the outrage, earlier reports of the holdup were to the effect that the machine which was robbed was the property of the Shawmut National Bank and the news was so given out to the newspapers.

Calmer reports, however, righted the error.

Women and children in the office and on the street near the Walton company were imperiled by the flying bullets as the revolver battle between the bank men and the bandits waxed hot, but none of the bystanders was hurt.

Charles M. Poupay, colored, one of the guards, was grazed by a bullet as his assailants fled, but was able to return to his post.

NEW YORK NUMBER.

The robbers were lying in wait at Spruce and Heard streets, a short distance from the spot where the weekly payroll was customarily taken from the bank treasure car for delivery.

The automobile in which they arrived and escaped carried the New York number plate 431,325. It was a dingy black. Two of the bandits were posted as lookouts a short distance away.

When the payroll car approached they waved handkerchiefs, being observed by girls in the office windows of the Walton company.

The bandit car drew closer and its two occupants got out and went to the aid of their fellows.

WOMAN IN CAR?

Here there is some difference of opinion as to wether or not there was a woman in the getaway machine. If there was, she remained in the car.

Immediately the bandits closed in, two from the front and two from the rear, firing at random to terrify the bank men, who were already leaving the machine.

The men in the money car were: Thomas Hoban, driver; John Coyne, in charge of the money, and Albert Kelley and Pompay, guards.

Powpay and Coyne were already on the ground, Coyne carrying the money, which was in three pouches.

Pompay drew his revolver and answered the fire of his assailants, but at his third shot his revolver jammed and he was temporarily out of the fray.

WOUNDED IN NECK

Hoban's gun was under his vest and he was prevented from getting at it in time. Coyne dropped the currency as he was rushed and jostled.

Max Glassman, the only eye-witness who had stood and watched the robbery, fled behind a building as a bullet missed him by an inch, and before the astounded people in the office were aware of what had happened the four bandits were running for their machine with the plunder.

Officer Powpay again got his revolver into working order and fired, striking one of the four in the neck, according to witnesses.

The man swayed and seemed about to fall.

Here, again, is a difference of opinion among excited witnesses, for some say that the woman supposed to have been in the machine leaned out and called to her confederates; "Don't leave Joe."

Here, too, is where the big weekly payroll was customarily taken from the bank treasure car for delivery.

TOWARD EVERETT.

"Joe" was assisted to his machine and Pompay fired again. This time it is believed he hit another man, who seemed to crumple up, but the big black car swept on, down Spruce and Heard and Carter streets to Washington avenue, and so in the general direction of Everett.

As it went down Heard street the car stalled, but the defect was soon remedied.

Officials of the First National Bank today announced that there were several other payrolls in the machine, which had not been removed, as they were to be delivered further on. It was not stated how much the bandits missed, but it was rumored that it was thousands.

From other sources it was learned that there was a well-defined suspicion that the bold daylight robbery was perpetrated by somebody knowing either the movements of the bank messenger car on Saturday mornings or the custom of the Walton company in paying off, or both.

GIRL CALLS POLICE

Additional confirmation of one carefully planned in advance and with nothing left to luck.

While the shooting was still in progress Miss Elsie Kirwin, a telephone operator employed by the Walton Company, telephoned the Chelsea police, who in turn sent out a general alarm all over Eastern Massachusetts.

Probably nobody got such a thrill out of the whole affair as a seven-year-old Max Glassen of No. 61 Jefferson avenue. He saw the bandits standing on the sidewalk as firing began.

Not realizing what was forward he stood gaping at the spectacle until a bullet sang within an inch of his ear.

"I had nothing to fight with and you bet I found the best place," said the youth after it was over and he had emerged from behind a factory wall.

Holdup Like Everett Robbery 3 Years Ago

Today's bold holdup of a bank treasure car at the corner of two busy Chelsea streets, and the theft of the $28,000 payroll of A. G. Walton & Company, recalls to mind a crime of striking similarity on December 20, 1918, when Paymaster Frank Brown of the General Electric Company was shot on Tileston street in Everett and a payroll of $13,500 stolen.

For that crime a number of alleged members of the underworld are still serving time in various penal institutions.

Louis (Poco) Bennett of Boston, who pleaded guilty to robbery in connection with the Everett holdup, recently completed his term in East Cambridge jail and was released.

As in today's holdup, the bandits operated in a big automobile. It was drawn up on Tileston street, at a point always passed by Paymaster Brown on his rounds.

Two men posted themselves behind a fence which separated the street from the sidewalk over a bridge covering the tracks of the Saugus branch of the Boston & Maine railroad.

Two more were posted on the opposite side of the bridge.

As the small money car came to with the bridge the chauffeur of the bandit's car pulled his machine around so that is blocked the paymaster's progress. The robbers opened fire, Brown was hit, and the money taken.

Charles S. Whittemore, general auditor of the General Electric Company, was arrested and convicted of conspiracy in the robbery, after days alleged New York gunmen had been taken, and was later paroled.

YOUTH'S CONFESSION CLEARS UP ROBBERIES

New Bedford, Nov. 26.—Following a three weeks' investigation of a series of breaks here and in Fall River, Daniel Siravo, seventeen years old, of No. 27 Franklin street, was arrested and his confession to the police clears up no less than nine cases which have baffled them. Siravo is charged with larceny of sums totaling well over $500, jewelry and Liberty Bonds.

PEACE OR WAR?

Studies at the Washington Conference No. II.

The Real Threat to Civilization.

In the opening paper of this series, I said that western civilization was undergoing a very rapid process of disorganization, a process that was already nearly complete in Russia and that was spreading out to the whole world. It is a huge secular process demanding unprecedented collective action among the nations if it is to be arrested, and I welcome the Washington Conference as the most hopeful beginning of such concerted action.

Now that the Washington Conference has defined its scope and limitations and got down to a definite scheme of work, it will be well to return to this ampler question of the decline in the world's affairs.

Now there are great numbers of people, more particularly in America, who still refuse to recognize this intermittent and variable process, which is taking all that we know as civilization in Europe towards a final destruction. The mere statement that this is going on they call "pessimism," and with a sort of genial hostility, they oppose any attempt to consider the possibility of any action to turn back the evil process.

Disasters Nothing to Optimists.

I suppose they would call the note of a fire alarm or the toot of a motor horn "pessimism"—until the thing hit them good and hard. It would have the same effect of a disagreeable warning, and lead to exactly the same sort of their ways. They argue that this alleged decadence is not going on, or, what is from a scientific standpoint the same thing, that it is never going to reach them or anyhow, that they really care for.

The starvation of Russia down to an empty shell, the actual set-up of a retrogression of South-eastern Europe to barbarism, the sinking of Germany towards the level of a drunken brothel, the steadily approaching collapse of Germany, is nothing to these optimists. America is all right, anyhow, and I am by brother's keeper just this phase of misfortune "over there" and the people must get out of the way. They want for the swing of the pendulum, the turn of the tide. Things will come right again—ever hopes of dead. There have been such slumps before in those countries "over there, notoriously less favored by God, as they are, than America.

And now I will refer before to go over the matter a little more fully and to give my grounds for supposing that there is not a coming undone, going on in our system, that will not necessarily recover—that the movement isn't the swing of a pendulum, nor this ebb an ebb that will turn again. And further, that this rotting process is bound to affect not merely Europe and Asia, but ultimately America.

Now let us recapitulate in the most general view what has happened and is happening at the present time to impoverish and disorganize the world. First, there has been a very great destruction of life through the war, especially in Europe.

Great Loss of Energy in War Casualties

Mostly, this has been the killing of young men, who would otherwise have been the flower of the working mass of these countries at the present time. This in itself is a great loss of energy, but it is recoverable loss. A new generation is already growing up to replace those millions of dead and to efface the economic loss of this tragic and sorrowful destruction.

Nor is the extraordinary waste of property, of energy and raw material spent in the war beyond an irreplaceable loss. Given toil, given courage, devastated areas can be restored, fresh energies found to replenish the countless millions and millions of tons of coal, of iron, wasted upon explosives. Many beautiful things, buildings, works of art and the like, have gone, never to be gotten again, but their place can conceivably be taken by new efforts of creative, artistic energy, given toil, given confidence and hope.

Far more serious, from the point of view of the future, than the destruction of either things or lives, are certain subtler destructions, because they strike at that toil, that courage and hope and confidence which are essential to any sort of recuperation.

Business Men Heavily Burdened.

And foremost is the fact of debt, everywhere, but particularly in the European countries. All the billions of worth of material that was squashed up and blown to pieces on the front had to be bought from its owners and to secure it every belligerent government had to incur debts. Lives cost little, but material much. The European combatants are overwhelmed with debts; every European worker and toiler, every European business man, is a debtor, and our European enterprise goes on under a crushing burden of taxation because of these debts. An attempt has been made to shift this unendurable burden from the victors to the vanquished, but the vanquished already had as much as they could carry.

Now when first mankind began to experiment with money and credit, the lot of the debtor was an intolerable one. He might become the slave of his creditor, he might be subjected to imprisonment and frightful punishments. But it was early discovered that it was not to the general advantage, it was not even to the advantage of the creditor to drive the debtor to despair.

Processes of bankruptcy were devised to clear him up, get what was possible from him and then let him go with a fresh start and hope. But we have not yet extended the same leniency to nations. Partly because national insolvencies have been rare. And so we have let nations in Europe so loaded with debts and punitive charges that every worker, every business man, will be under his share in this burden from the cradle to the grave.

He will be a debt serf to the domestic or foreign creditor and all his enterprises will be weighted and discouraged by this obligation. Debt is one immense and universal disarrangement to the throughout all Europe.

But even that might not prevent the recovery of Europe. There is yet another and profounder evil in operation to keep it from "getting to work" to reconstruct their shattered economic life. That is the increasing failure of money to do its work. Europe cannot get to work, cannot get from going down, because every large part of the world the medium of exchange has become untrustworthy and unusable. That is the immediate thing that is destroying civilization in the old world.

We have to remember that our whole economic order is based on money. We do not know any way of working a big business, a manufactory, a large farm, a mine, except by money payments. Payment in kind, barter and the like, are ancient and clumsy methods. We cannot imagine a great city like New York getting along with its industrial and business life on any such basis.

Every modern city, London, Paris, Berlin, is built on a money basis, and will collapse into utter ruin, as Petersburg and Moscow collapsed, if money fails. But over large and increasing areas of Europe money is now of such fluctuating and uncertain purchasing power as no one will enter into business or make any contract or make any monetary bargains ahead.

Social Outbreaks Not Result of Plots.

Such a thing has never occurred to anything like the same extent before in all history, and it is upon this business enterprise altogether and throwing whole masses of working people out of employment. Europe, without trustworthy money, is as paralyzed as a brain without its blood supply. She cannot act, she cannot move. Employment becomes impossible and production dies away.

The towns move steadily toward the starvation that has overtaken Petersburg and Moscow, and the cultivators cease to grow anything except to feed their own people. To go to market with produce, except to barter, is a mockery. The schools are closed, the hospitals, the public services; the teachers and doctors and officials cannot be paid, and everywhere disease and decay set in.

This state of affairs has been brought about by the reckless manufacture of paper money by nearly every European government; we can measure their recklessness roughly by comparing their present war debt with their exchanges. It is only now that we are beginning to realize the enormity of the disaster which this demoralization of money is bringing upon the world. We have weakened the link of cash payments, which has hitherto held civilization together, to the breaking point.

As the link breaks, the machine stops. The modern city will become a formless mob of unemployed men and the countryside will become a wilderness of food hoarding peasants—and since the urban masses will have no food and no means of commanding it, we must expect the most violent perturbations before we can bring ourselves to accept their fate in a philosophical spirit.

Revolutionary social outbreaks are not the results of plots; they are symptoms of social disease. They are not causes, but effects. This is what I mean when I write of a breakdown of civilization. I mean the death of town life, which cannot go on without money, and the cessation of organized communications. I mean a breakdown of the organizations for keeping the peace.

AID FOR BASKET FUND FROM BOXING FANS

Crowd at Fenway A. A. Bouts in Arena Give Liberally for the Poor

Boxing fans who attended the fine exhibition at the Arena last night, under the auspices of Fenway A. A., contributed freely to the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund, which is to provide Christmas dinners to thousands of needy families.

Lovers of this popular sport came to the front in good fashion at the Arena show, through the courtesy of Roy Green, president of the Fenway A. A. Mr. Green has always been a firm believer in the good work done by the American's Christmas Fund.

COLLECTORS VOLUNTEER.

The collecting was done by a large group of young men and women, who are aiding the Christmas Fund in many ways.

Among those who helped in this work were the following: Jack Collins, Martin Kelliher, Johnny Wilson, Jack McGivern, Henry Meyers, Spider Murphy and Tommy MacKlen, of the Morning Glory Club, Charlestown; Lena Soloman, Jennie Bloomenthal, Arthur Crowley, Sam Massell, David Larsky, Thomas Chittick, Ed Macie, Abe Friedman, Johnnie Clinton, Willie Harmon, Harry Kelly, Tom Green, Roy Green, Bob Brennan, Tommy Ford, F. O'Connor, K. Mullane, A. O'Connor, Al Guaranty, F. Martin, L. McGovern, G. Hushon, E. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Pescaglia, Marion Marshall, Catherine Curry, Ruth Goodman, William Marshall, E. Turner, G. Donahue, P. Lordan, G. Kelley, M. Corbett, A. Kelley, Nate Siegal and Young Happy.

WRESTLING FANS GIVE $150.72.

Wrestling fans who attended George V. Tuohey's big tournament at Mechanics Building, Thanksgiving night, contributed $150.72 to the fund. This is one of the largest sums contributed to the fund this season, and is proof that the men and women who follow sporting events in this city have big hearts and are anxious that no children in the Greater Boston shall go hungry on Christmas Day. Mr. Tuohey has always co-operated in helping the American's Christmas Fund a success.

Tickets are selling rapidly for the entertainment and dance to be given by the Cambridge Academies, Friday evening, December 2, under the auspices of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Heinemann. All members of the Heinemann House Academy staff have volunteered their services free for the occasion. This includes the members of Henry's Orchestra, P. Peterson, floor manager; Miss Hazel McGaffey, John Breen, Frank Black and Charlie Merbury.

Among those who will participate in the entertainment are Miss Edith Plante, Miss Ruth Green, Gordon Peterson, Florence Hoffman, who, although but five years of age, is a wonderful toe dancer; Arline Drake and Billie Grant.

SELLS PHOTOS FOR FUND.

Miss Florence C. Breen of Main street, Charlestown, one of the star pupils of the Amelia Burnham Studio of Dancing, who is to appear in solo numbers at the big Charity Ball and Entertainment at the Copley-Plaza on Thursday evening, December 15, is aiding the Fund in many ways. Among other things, she is selling artistic photographs of herself entitled "Farewell to Autumn," recently made by George E. Lewis of Boston. The picture shows Miss Breen in an artistic pose as the central figure of a woodland scene.

Miss Breen is a pretty, eighteen year-old department store salesgirl. Although she has studied aesthetic dancing for only one year, she is unusually proficient and a big success is forecast for her. During the recent appearance of Anna Pavlowa, the famous Russian dancer, in Boston, the little salesgirl was presented a large bouquet of roses and chrysanthemums. Miss Breen had gone behind the scenes to meet Madame Pavlowa, to express her admiration. The Russian dancer gave her the huge bouquet which had just been passed over the footlights to herself.

APPEALS FOR FOOD.

From East Boston came the following appeal:

"My husband got hurt five months ago and cannot work. I have eight children to support, and we will be without a Christmas dinner unless you remember us."

A woman from South Boston wrote: "I am a widow with three children. The oldest is fourteen and the youngest ten. I am not working myself and cannot get any, so if you will please send us a Christmas Basket we will be very happy."

The following was received from Charlestown:

"Please do not forget my four children this year. Their father left them three years ago and we have not seen him since. Please send us a Christmas Basket so we will be happy."

HUSBAND OUT OF WORK.

An appeal from a woman in Roxbury:

"My husband has not been working since last March. There are also five children, and I try to get along on what I can make at sewing. Will you please send us a basket for Christmas, and help bring a little happiness for us?"

From Cambridge came the following:

"Kindly send us a Christmas basket. I have three girls to support. My husband is dead five years, and I have been sick, and have been operated upon twice. I hope you will not forget us Christmas."

A little girl from Charlestown wrote: "I am a little girl thirteen years old. I have a brother two years younger. My father is dead, and mother is not feeling well. She has a sore finger and is unable to work. Please make us happy Christmas."

20 POOR CHILDREN GUESTS OF DESTROYER

The officers and crew of the destroyer Murray at the Charlestown Navy Yard, not willing to enjoy their Thanksgiving dinner without sharing it, Thursday sent out an S. O. S. call to the Salvation Army for twenty poor youngsters to be their guests at dinner aboard the vessel. The children were hurriedly recruited and escorted to the Navy Yard by Passions." The sailors dined them royally on roast turkey and all the trimmings, after which the children entertained the sailors with songs, the sailors repaying the compliment by entertaining the children in the same way. Each of the youngsters was sent home with fruit, nuts and a box of chocolates and invited to come again.

NURSE'S STORY GIVES AID TO ARBUCKLE

Miss Morgan Also Testifies to Attacks of Illness Miss Rappe Had

"He said: 'My God, they have no right to call you as a witness for either side. Your reputation will be ruined.'"

Miss Morgan related a number of occurrences when Miss Rappe was seized with an attack of illness, necessitating a radical procedure for bringing her relief. At each of these times, the nurse said, Miss Rappe bore her clothing, screamed and became hysterical.

TORE HER CLOTHES OFF.

"She would get double up and cry 'My God,'" said Miss Morgan. "She tore all her clothes off and seemed to get wild. One time she tore out in the street without her clothes and I had to run after her and bring her back."

The witness declared these attacks were caused by liquor and were usually about a month apart, although two of them occurred within three days of each other. She said she left Miss Rappe because the girl would not obey her and that Miss Rappe was supposed to be on a vegetable diet, she said, but did not stick to the regime prescribed.

The friend of Miss Rappe, who gave similar testimony was an acquaintance rather than a friend, it was through the medium of one of these "attacks" that Mrs. Minnis Neighbors of Los Angeles met Miss Rappe at Wheeler, Hot Springs, last August. She found Miss Rappe, she said, doubled up in the bathroom at the hotel and ministered to her.

A second similar attack occurred later the same day, Mrs. Neighbors said, at her own cottage. Testimony of a physiological nature was given by Mrs. Neighbors indicating that Miss Rappe was suffering with internal trouble.

EX-SWEETHEART TESTIFIES.

The former sweetheart of Miss Rappe was the last witness of the day. He was Harry B. Barker, a California rancher, who said he "kept company" with Miss Rappe in Chicago for nearly five years. He described a long series of similar attacks of illness. He asked if Miss was not thirteen years old in 1910, and said he did not know how old she was.

Cross-examination failed to shake the witness. Miss Rappe was, although the prosecution appeared to be laying a foundation several times for impeaching testimony to come later.

Another important point covered by the defence was in the testimony of Dr. M. E. Hummell, who related a conversation he had with Miss Rappe one morning after the Arbuckle party. In that conversation, he said, the girl told him she was feeling fine that day before and did not remember what had happened.

Dr. Hummell was asked if he made a diagnosis at the time of what he thought was the matter with Miss Rappe and said he did. Over the objection of the State he was permitted to tell the jury his diagnosis:

"Alcoholism," he said.

Two witnesses of the morning, Drs. Fred H. Gumwald and G. B. Shields, corroborated the previous expert testimony and announced it their belief that spontaneous internal injury was possible without outside force.

'BLUEBEARD' CRINGES AS BONES FOUND IN HIS HOME ARE IDENTIFIED

QUARRELS WITH HIS COUNSEL

Paris, Nov. 26.—Landru's life today hangs on the single thread as to whether the jury will accept as positive the identification by experts of 256 pieces of bones found in the rubbish heap back of the Gambais Villa.

The positive testimony was that the bones had belonged to three and possibly more persons, one expert positively affirming that those persons were women. This damaging evidence made the debonaire Bluebeard quail.

Despite the openly-voiced incredulity of "Bluebeard" Landru, Professor Bataillon, took a tiny fragment of charred ivory scarcely bigger than a piece of a match-stick, and deduced from it that it was once a part of a hollow tooth of an adult person, probably a woman about five feet tall and middle-aged.

Similar astounding identifications made by other experts, as well as by other famous chemists and savants during the day produced the most unfavorable impression against the Bluebeard.

Rumors of a bitter quarrel between Landru and his attorney, the famous Moro-Giaffert, seemed to be confirmed, when Landru several times waved aside the warning of his counsel and insisted upon explaining the answers to questions. At a quarrel in Landru's cell it is declared Giaffert threatened to throw up the case unless Landru left the defence wholly in his hands, to which Landru is said to have retorted:

"You have only your reputation to lose, but I have my head."

The present indications are that the case is steadily going against Landru. This view is supported by the changed attitude of prominent women who have been regular attendants.

Mistinguett, the comedienne, who at the outset of the trial said "He ought to be decorated," now reverses her opinion, saying:

"If he is guilty every woman in Paris ought to be present at the guillotine, so that it might be a warning to them."

Maurice Chevalier, actor-manager, who was said to have offered Landru a part if he is acquitted, withdrew the offer, and declared:

"I cannot attend the trial any longer. It suffocates me."

At the same time Mlle. Spinelly, the well known divette, was so overcome after the gruesome evidence that she could not appear in The Love Review at the Variettes Theatre which was staged especially for her.

Landru's attitude in the dock is becoming less assured and many of his replies are delivered in a hesitating manner, and frequently with appealing glances at his attorney, who refuses to pay any attention to him.

BONES "PLANTED" IS CLAIM.

The accused is now basing his whole case on the theory that the bones were "planted" at the Gambais villa between the time of his arrest and a date some ten days later, when the seals were finally placed upon the house and contents.

The defence alleges that in the interim the villa became a morbid pilgrimage for hundreds of sensation seekers, who not only thronged the villa, but ate, danced and became drunk there nightly, alleging that any one of these might have had a grudge against this man, charged with many crimes. A dramatic incident occurred when Landru declared:

"You will see how true this is when the missing women are finally found."

At this point Attorney Lagasse, of the prosecution, snatched the package of bones from the table and bounded toward Landru, shouting:

"You ask where your sweethearts are—here they are."

Then it was that the face of Landru shows the resemblance to a rat or fox.

His sharp, alert eyes, often with furtive glances out of the corners show his fear of the dangers that lurk about him. When the court room breaks into a laugh at his quick, remarkable wit, he turns to the audience without a change of expression, and remarks: "There is nothing to laugh at with my head at stake."

WEIRD APPEARANCE.

His scrawny neck and long silken beard, with his long nose protruding as if invented on purpose to smell danger, and his low brow encircled with a band of dark hair showing his smooth pate, give him a strangely weird appearance.

His mouth with the long thin lips that you seldom see on account of the thick beard, seldom laughs except in the sickly sort of way which he emphasizes with excited gestures, giving you occasionally a view of a row of sharp teeth.

When the lawyers for the prosecution read aloud the account of some of his strange affairs that have been dug up by detectives, Landru sweeps with his chair and busies himself with papers adjusting his big horn-rim spectacles—but he does not miss a word.

RADICALS SCORE JUSTICE OF U. S. COURTS

Elizabeth Gurley Flynn Outlines Overseas Reaction to Case of Sacco and Vanzetti

New York, Nov. 26.—Outspoken condemnation of American courts was applauded tumultuously at the first big Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting in this city at the Central Opera House last night.

Twenty policemen and a group of Department of Justice agents were stationed inside and outside the building, while more than 2,500 men and women, many of them foreigners, sang, cheered and clapped their approval of the radical interpretation of the case.

Frequent cries interrupted the fervid oratory of the speakers. Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Arturo Giovanitti, Fred Biedenkapp, and others. But the record, while demonstrative, showed no spirit of violence. When someone cried, "That's Americanism for you—shame!" the crowd laughed and applauded.

Miss Flynn won prolonged cheering when she outlined her view of the European reaction to the case.

"The answer is that the European workers will no longer be bluffed by American justice," she declared, adding, "They know of the political prisoners in America."

For the most part organizers of the meeting were of the extreme radical group. John Haynes Holmes, scheduled to speak, did not appear, but sent a message in which he expressed his conviction of the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The case was continued to next Friday, with Fisher pleading not guilty.

TWO HUSBANDS HUNT WILD WOMAN

2 Missing Wives Sought as Phantom of Saugus Woods

Two husbands, whose wives are missing, today scoured the North Saugus woods with posses of men, women, children and Boy Scouts, for the phantom woman, whose appearance and cries were again reported last night.

The two heart-broken husbands, who believe their wives may be the "wild woman" with long, silky hair streaming down her back, and wearing dangling around her shoe top, and presenting a general half clad appearance who has for seven days startled man and terrorized women who have seen the strange apparition, are Edward A. Howditch, formerly of No. 539 Summer street, Lynn, now of the Merrimac House, Boston, and Harold Tonneen of No. 17 Warnsett street, Forest Hills.

Howditch declares that his wife, Sadie, thirty-two years old, disappeared November 12, following a family row, caused, he said, because he had been out of work for some time and had been unable to land a job.

Her description fallies with that of the mystery woman. When she left she wore a wide-brim black hat, brown coat with fur collar, and a black skirt. She has brown hair, blue eyes, is light complexioned, five feet, two inches tall, and weighs 145 pounds. The father is left with three children, Irene, ten; Edward, eight; and Chester, six.

The husband and father states his wife borrowed small sums of money from neighbors before she left. Howditch was forced to give up his Lynn tenement, store his furniture, and give his children over to relatives.

Up to the time he was laid off, during the present slack period, Howditch was employed at the Lynn plant of the General Electric Company. Prior to that he was a motorman on the Saugus-Melrose line of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railroad Company.

FORMERLY OF LYNN.

Mrs. Lily Tonneen disappeared November 4. She is the mother of a babe. The husband declared his wife had not been well for some time, and believes she may have become temporarily unbalanced and wandered to Saugus. The Tonneens formerly lived on Western avenue, Lynn.

Chief of Police Mansfield of the town of Saugus called to the Boston American reporter that he is all through with the search for the "wild woman of the woods," until something more tangible than the evidence thus far uncovered has been shown him.

"I hate to say that anyone is not sticking to facts," declared the chief, "but from my investigation it would seem to me that the whole thing is nothing but a fake, with the husband worked up into a fine yarn. It certainly seems like pure bosh."

PLOT IS CHARGED BY 'DAUGHTER' OF NILSSON

Claimant to Millions Says Money Was Used to Deprive Her of Rights

Swedish singer, who shared honors with Lind and Patti, paid a visit to Worcester, where a daughter was born. It is charged that she abandoned the child in Boston without even giving her right name.

Mrs. Murray says money was paid to keep her from her birthright and her share in Nilsson's $15,000,000 estate. Even violence has been attempted, she declares, to cheat her out of her rights.

According to Mrs. Murray, late in 1881 a Swedish woman of extraordinary beauty, accompanied by a companion, landed in New York. They made their way to Worcester and went to the home of a French musician.

The official records of the city of Worcester reveal the birth secrets of the city for nearly two centuries back. One reads:

"December 19, 1881, to Christine Nelson and Otto Carlson, a daughter. Sadie Mary Carlson."

Was the Swedish woman who came to Worcester, as Christine Nelson, really the singer, whose voice thrilled continents, and was the Otto Carlson really Nilsson's first husband, Count Rouzaud, who at the time was confined in a madhouse in France?

Such is the claim of the Lynn wife, and on this evidence she is building up her fight for a share of the singer's millions.

The woman who accompanied "Christine Nelson" to Worcester gave her name as Rosa de Miranda. Mme. Nilsson, when she visited the second time, married Count Angel de Miranda.

Dr. Austin K. Gould, who attended "Christine Nelson," is dead. Samuel E. Staples, who reported the child birth to the city clerk, is dead. But the French musician, at whose home the child was born, is said to be living in Worcester.

Pictures showing Mrs. Murray when she was a little girl show she resembled Miss Nilsson.

"I am the daughter of Christine Nilsson and I intend at last to have my birthright," says Mrs. Murray.

'Marriage Is All Right, but Not on $11 a Week,' Says Wife Who Fled

Baby Lured Mrs. Gertrude Greenidge Back and Now, Minus Husband and Home, She will Seek Job and Shun "Wedded Bliss"

By HAZEL CANNING

Young Mrs. Gertrude Greenidge has returned to her mother at No. 177 River street, Cambridge, with her hair bobbed, determination in her soul, and a perfectly new philosophy of matrimony.

When Mrs. Greenidge left home she had a modest little domicile of her own in the apartment upstairs in her mother's house. She had a baby, one year and three months olds. In addition to this, she had a husband. On her return, she found the house locked. She found the baby all safe and comfy log, her mother had seen to the baby. But, last of all, she found the husband gone.

"Fine," quoth young Mrs. Greenidge to her interviewer. "What do I care for the home—the installment furniture's not paid for, and for the baby—I care a lot for her—just love her—she is what throbbed five feet, but the husband—he has gone and that is best news of all. I just remained away till he should go. Now I can get a job, which, incidentally, is better than many husbands."

Mrs. Greenidge will tell you that old Goddess Economics also plays a large part in breaking up many a romance.

ON $11 A WEEK.

"It's no joke trying to run a house and keep cheerful on eleven dollars a week," young Mrs. Greenidge will tell you, "particularly when your husband dreams you are a German."

Mrs. Greenidge's position on the matrimonial question is very plain. A baby is fine, but the other things that go to make up a marriage are not always what the poets have painted them. She tells her story, with conviction.

"Things came to a crisis between my husband and myself," said she, "the Saturday night before he drew $22 a week. Of this he used to give me $11 to run the house and buy food and clothe myself and baby. The eleven dollars are not great shucks when it comes to running a house. In addition, my husband had an idea of husbandly discipline which always seemed a bit rough to me. He never allowed me to go out to a moving picture show or anything with a fun who was my friend. He never wished me to have any friends at all in our home. He thought a husband and a baby were enough, and that I ought to be content. Content with a world except baby and him—particularly him. So, Saturday, I told him what I had planned to tell him for some time.

"I'm through with you," I said before I left. He had just given me the eleven dollars weekly allowance. I've got tired," I told him, "of living in the place of the Germans—even in your dreams. I will no longer get a job for you, or live in the house that you live in again. I am weary of this matrimony. I am going to get a job myself. And after this you can dream I am a German and strike out all you wish."

AND THEN SHE LEFT.

"This is what I told him and I left. I intended to stay away till I had a good job, somewhere, and had earned myself some decent clothes. For when I left my feet were on the ground and I had no gloves on my hands. I borrowed ten dollars from a friend, and managed all right. But, once, in the South Station, I thought I saw detectives looking at me. I was afraid—it was a little later that I got my hair cut, to help disguise me, for I thought someone was looking for me to bring me back home. Then, Thanksgiving grew near. I was lonesome for my baby. I got on the car and rode to Cambridge and peeped in through the window at her, where she sat in my mother's house, on the floor beside my apartment. I wanted to go in, but I was afraid. So I went back to Boston.

"Then, that night, I slept at a Boston hotel, in a room next to one that were fighting all night. I grew very scared and I wished I was safe with my mother and baby, minus my husband, and that $11, and the home I didn't want to go back to.

"So I thought and I thought. Then I went out to Cambridge again, and this time I just couldn't help it—I knocked on the door. My mother came, and I ran into her arms. It was all right; my husband had gone and mother and I cried together. Now I'm going to work, and mother will take care of my little Gertrude, and I don't want to be married any more.

"Maybe marriage is all right—but not on eleven dollars a week. My advice to all girls placed similarly is run away, and don't come back till the coast is clear." Then go to work and forget romance. For there's not half as much romance in the world as the poets would make you believe."

TWO AUTO OFFENDERS IN CHARLESTOWN COURT

For operating an automobile on Rutherford avenue, Charlestown, while under the influence of liquor, Albert M. Walles of Waverley street, Malden, was sentenced by Judge Sullivan in the Charlestown Court to serve two months in the House of Correction. He appealed and was held in $500 for the Superior Court. In the same court, Maurice Gider of Quincy street, Roxbury, was fined $75 for having no certificate of registration and an additional $25 for having no license on his person, when he was held up by Patrolman Garrett. He appealed the fines of $50 and was held in $400 for the Superior Court.

MRS. GERTRUDE GREENIDGE

Young Cambridge wife who decided that matrimony on a small income wasn't the same in fact as in romance. Went away until her husband closed their home. "A job is better than a husband," she declares.

MAN FIRES SHOT AT BURGLAR IN CAMBRIDGE

Blood Stains Indicate Robber Who Made His Escape, Was Wounded

Cambridge police today sought a burglar who entered the apartment of Chester Kingsley at No. 1072 Massachusetts avenue while the family and a friend were in a game of cards in an adjoining room.

The burglar calmly sorted out a number of trinkets from some jewelry on Kingsley's dressing table and fled only when Kingsley fired at him with an automatic pistol. He was possibly hit.

The robber made his entrance through a window. When discovered he jumped through the same window onto an iron fence, tearing off a six inch spike by the force of his fall and then dropping six feet to the ground.

Mrs. Rose Kingsley, mother of Chester, discovered the thief when she went to investigate a slight noise in the direction of the kitchen.

Save for some scattered blood stains, the thief left no trace. He got no loot.

MRS. GRAY, ONCE BACK BAY BELLE, SEEKS DIVORCE

Charges Her Harvard Athlete Husband With Failure to Provide

Once more the limelight is playing fitfully upon Mrs. Austin Gray of New York and Newport, but before her marriage to the Harvard athlete in 1904, of No. 87 Beacon street, Boston, her romance, which startled Boston society years ago, has been shattered and she has brought suit to free herself from her marital ties binding her to the husband of her two children. The petition will come up in Newport December 6.

Mrs. Gray charged her husband with failure to provide and, though Gray was reported to have engaged an attorney to look after Mrs. Gray's interests, it was believed there would be no attempt to fight his wife's suit.

The Gray's, it was understood, agreed to disagree and separate last Summer. Mrs. Gray since then has been occupying one of the Pinard cottages in Newport.

Even divorce-burdened Gotham and Newport nearly breathed a sigh of relief when gossip began to rumor a break between Mr. and Mrs. Gray, for their romance had been idyllic.

TEMPESTUOUS COURTSHIP

Mr. Gray is a grandson of the late John Hinton Gray, judge of the New York Court of Appeals and wealthy attorney. His mother was Turnbull, but after the marriage of his mother to Judge Gray the young man obtained court permission to change his own name.

About that time he entered Harvard and joined at once into the front rank of athletes. He was a powerful tennis player and track man, and stood high in his studies as well.

The tall, blue-eyed young man met and fell head over heels in love with beautiful Miss Alice Burnham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Burnham of Beacon street and Newport.

While society was still talking of the tempestuous courtship, there came the announcement that the young people had changed their minds and the engagement was off. Austin went to Newport to play in a championship match, and gossip linked his name with that of the beautiful Cynthia Hoche, daughter of Mrs. Frances Burke-Roche of New York.

What society was still talking of the tempestuous courtship, there came the announcement that the young people had changed their minds and the engagement was off. Austin went to Newport to play in a championship match, and gossip linked his name with that of the beautiful Cynthia Hoche, daughter of Mrs. Frances Burke-Roche of New York.

But gossip was busy. Three days later Gray and Miss Burnham eloped and stunned society started gossiping anew.

Truce love found a smooth course for the young couple after that Gray had reaped a fortune with his brokerage firm. But Gray entered the brokerage business in a reckless and, like many a better and richer man, was plucked bare of all he had.

TAKES JOB AT STORE.

He "got a job" with John Wanamaker's New York department store, working from eight to six, giving up his yacht and home with which he lived in Newport, his Winters in France and his home in New York and moved to East Thirty-fourth street, where the Grays and the poorly paid elevated roars.

And all this time Mrs. Gray clung to him, aiding him in every possible way, ignoring the hardships, the slights of former friends, the snubs of inferiors, and even cynical society talk and gossip. Here "was a case of the real thing in love."

Then came, only last Summer, word that there was a rift in the Gray matrimonial lute; that Mrs. Gray and Mr. Gray did not speak in the seclusion of their home, and that Gray stayed with his little family of three as little as possible.

WIFE ACCUSES LEXINGTON WOMAN

Mrs. Lucy R. Mahoney Applies for Divorce and Names Corespondent

Charging her husband with infidelity, cruel and abusive treatment as drafiers to provide, Mrs. Lucy R. Mahoney of Boston, today filed suit for divorce in the Suffolk County Superior court against her husband, George L. Mahoney.

Mrs. Mahoney names as co-respondent Mrs. Elizabeth Coolidge of Massachusetts avenue, East Lexington.

Mrs. Mahoney charges that her husband has failed to provide for her support since last July. She asks for an attachment of $1000 on her husband's property to secure possible alimony and counsel fees. She also asks to be allowed to resume her maiden name of Chaplik, and asks for the custody of her two-year-old daughter Ellen F. Mahoney. The Mahoneys were married in Boston on Dec. 9, 1917.

In the same court Mrs. Katheryn C. Hall, of Revere, brought suit for divorce against Alfred S. Hall, Jr., of Revere, charging cruel and abusive treatment.

$2,000,000 LOSS IN AUGUSTA, GA., FIRE

Business Blocks, Hotel and Newspaper Plant Destroyed by Flames

Augusta, Ga., Nov. 26.—Nearly one-half of the 700 block of Broad street and the entire eastern side of the 200 block of Jackson street, both in the heart of Augusta's business section, were destroyed by fire early today, with a total loss of about $2,000,000.

The fire started about 2 o'clock in the two-story Johnson building at Jackson and Broad streets, and was not brought under control until daylight, after fire departments from Savannah, Atlanta, Macon, Columbia, Charleston, Aiken and Waynesboro had been summoned. The Aiken department was the only one to arrive in time to aid the Augusta fire fighters.

The following buildings were in the path of the flames, Johnson Building, total loss; Harrison Building, total loss; Albon Hotel, total loss and Genaust Dairy burned to ashes.

The offices and plant of the Augusta Chronicle in the Harrison Building were a complete loss. Other business establishments on Broad street destroyed were: Liggett's Drug Store, F. E. Ferris & Company; John J. Miller & Company; Gardelle's Drug Store, and men's clothing department of J. B. White & Company.

While the main fire was raging another broke out in the 400 block of Jackson street, gutting three buildings. Belief was expressed by Chief Fireman Reynolds that this fire had no connection with the main fire.

SEE DANGER IN RENEWAL OF IRISH WAR

English Papers Object to More Bloodshed if Peace Plans Fail

London, Nov. 26 (by the Associated Press).—A chorus of vigorous protest against renewal of warfare in Ireland in the event peace negotiations collapse is raised by the morning newspapers, after the meeting yesterday of Premier Lloyd George and Sir James Craig, Ulster Premier.

In the conference the British Cabinet chief informed Sir James that Sinn Fein Ireland had refused to swear allegiance to the Crown in return for an Ulster agreement to enter an all-Ireland Parliament.

The seriousness of the situation resulting from this refusal calls forth the references to a possible recurrence of hostilities.

"The government cannot engage in civil war with the Irish nation, if the people of Great Britain are determined that there shall be no war," declares the Daily News, adding: "That is the dominant factor of the situation."

The Daily Herald, the labor organ, says: "A new war would outrage the morals of the whole world and would never receive the sanction of the British people. The trades union and labor movement must resist to the utmost further reference to the arbitrament of force."

The men of all parties are urged by the Daily Express to rally to the defence of an Irish settlement. It asserts that nothing but public opinion can accomplish this result.

The Westminster Gazette says it believes the British people are "quite determined not to fight anybody in Ireland in the interests of anybody else in Ireland."

Further developments are awaited with the keenest anxiety, the newspapers generally finding little comfort in the outlook beyond the fact that negotiations are proceeding.

The next definite development in the situation, it is believed, will not come before Tuesday, when Sir James will report to his Parliament. On the same date the official correspondence that has passed between the various delegations may be officially published. Sir James intimated his report would tend to relieve the tension existing in Ulster.

"CANADIAN NIGHT" AT TRINITY, NEWTON CENTRE

Next Sunday night will be "Canadian Night" in Trinity Church, Newton Centre, in the series of Disarmament Services. Captain Daniel A. MacKay of the Canadian Northwestern Mounted Police will speak at 7:15 on "9,000 Miles of Unfortified Border." He will tell how law and order are maintained on the edge of civilization and will speak of characters and experiences peculiar to border life.

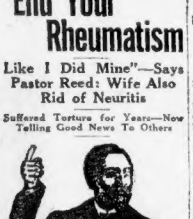
WIFE OF ARTHUR PARKER SUES HIM FOR DIVORCE

Worcester, Nov. 26.—Worcester society circles today received a new stir when Mrs. Eva M. Parker supplemented her separate maintenance action against Arthur Parker, president and treasurer of the Parker Wire Goods Company, with a suit for divorce. Mrs. Parker charges that the manufacturer deserted her on April 15, 1911.

"End Your Rheumatism"

Like I Did Mine"—Says Pastor Reed: Wife Also Rid of Neuritis

Suffered Torture for Years—Now Telling Good News To Others



"Don't Believe That Old Humbug About 'Uric Acid' Being the Cause of Rheumatism—It's Not So."

Emphatically asserting that thousands of unfortunate sufferers have been led into taking wrong treatments under the old and false belief that "Uric Acid" causes rheumatism, Pastor H. W. Reed says:

"As do some of our highest medical authorities, I now know that 'Uric Acid' never did and never will cause rheumatism! But it took me many years to find out this truth. I learned how to get rid of my rheumatism and regain my health and strength, through reading 'The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism,' a work written by an authority who has scientifically studied the cause and treatment of rheumatism for over twenty years. It was indeed a veritable revelation!

"I had suffered agony for years from rheumatism and associated disorders, and Mrs. Reed was tortured with the demon neuritis almost beyond endurance. We had read and talked so much about 'Uric Acid' that our minds seemed poisoned. But the 'Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism' made it all clear to us and now we are both free from the suffering and misery we endured so many years. I believe I was the hardest man in the world to convert! For me to discard the old 'Uric Acid' theory, and what I now know to be absolutely false, for the new, scientific understanding of the causes and cure of rheumatism, was like asking me to change my religious beliefs! But I did change, and it was a fortunate day for me and mine when I did so."

NOTE: "The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism" referred to above by Pastor Reed lays bare facts about rheumatism and its associated disorders ever looked by doctors and scientists for centuries past. It is a work that should be in the hands of every man or woman who has the slightest symptoms of rheumatism, neuritis, lumbago or gout. Anyone who sends name and address to E. F. Clearwater, 474-B Street, Hallowell, Maine, will receive it by mail postage paid and absolutely free. Send now, lest you forget the address! If not a sufferer, cut out this explanation and send it to some afflicted friend.

—Fresh From Paris—

Latest Word From Marie Suzanne

Paris, France.

PARIS drapes rather than fits many of her most attractive gowns for formal evening wear. This idea has been successfully applied to magenta velvet in the sketch at the left. Only one width of the tissue is used, being supported by a narrow strap over one shoulder and draped on the corresponding hip, whence it continues in a long pointed train. A knot of silver tulle posed over this same hip has loops and a cascading end that reaches below the skirt edge.

BLACK satin and black lace, always so flattering to one, refuse to be relegated to the waiting mode, but appear fresh in the mode that is coming. A slender slip of black satin relies upon several strands of tiny pearls to support its pointed bodice over the shoulders. Three ropes of larger pearls at intervals indicate a choice of waistlines, at the centre front of which a cockade of black satin and black velvet ribbon is posed. Full panels of black celophane lace go the length of trailing upon the floor at each side.

FALSE AGES MAY LOSE VOTE TO WOMEN

Police Checking Up on Supplementary Voting List All Over City

Did you give your right age when you registered, Miss (or Mrs.) Voter?

If you didn't and the election commissioners find out, you may find it embarrassing to explain your perjury before the commissioners.

Worse than that, your true age may be exposed to the world.

And the commissioners say they mean to check up the lists. Police officers all over the city have started investigating names on the supplementary voting list and make a personal call at the homes of registrants to verify statements on the lists.

If you thought it was harmless to chop off five years or so from your age, you may be dropped from the voting list, disfranchised for telling falsehood.

Less than 10 per cent. of the men and women have placed their names on the voting lists to be eligible to vote on election day. The election commissioners' figures show that 20 per cent. of the women registered and about 30 per cent. of the men.

The police listed 245,025 women and 255,768 men in their canvass of possible voters last April, but the total registration was 129,870 men and 72,398 women.

GOVERNOR ASKS HAYS TO REMOVE MARINES

Madison, Wis., Nov. 26.—Wisconsin came to the front today as the first State to challenge the right of Postmaster-General Hays to place U. S. marines in mail trains with orders to "shoot to kill" whenever unauthorized travelers are found on trains.

Governor John J. Blaine, it became known today, has requested Postmaster-General Hays to take marine guards off mail trains and has started a regulation on Secretary of the Navy Denby to produce in court Marcus M. Hansen, a marine, who shot Otto Lambrecht near Greenbay, Sunday, when Lambrecht attempted to steal a ride on a train.

$200 BLAZE STARTLES CHINATOWN RESIDENTS

The clanging of fire apparatus responding to an alarm on Harrison avenue, where a blaze that started in the Siwoo Restaurant Company's establishment threatened the building, roused the entire neighborhood and brought hundreds of Celestials in wild excitement into the streets. The firemen extinguished the blaze before more than $200 damage was done and the police stilled the fears of the Chinese.

PLANS RIVAL OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Association to Enforce Decisions of Washington Parley Backed by Administration

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 26.—If plans of the administration materialize, it seems certain today that before the year passes there will be a strong and healthy rival of the League of Nations in the field.

It may be called an Association of Nations, an Association for the Limitation of Armaments or Society for the Maintenance of International Peace—anything but a "League of Nations"—and the work will be to perpetuate the agreements and decisions that are to be reached by the powers now assembled here. That its work will parallel that of the present League of Nations at Geneva in many particulars is not denied.

Details of the organization which it is planned to perfect here before the statesmen return home are not yet complete. They are being worked out, however, and it is the confident expectation that by the time the conference adjourns President Harding and his advisers will be prepared to lay before the departing statesmen a plan by which those who took part in this conference and other peacefully inclined nations may gather each year at a common table to discuss their problems.

Germany will be invited to come in, and possibly Russia, and certainly those countries of Central and Southern Europe, like Jugo-Slavia, Rumania, Czecho - Slovakia and Greece will be asked, because it is their misfortune of large standing armies, that has kept Europe bolstered unfortunately for years.

The impelling reason for America taking the lead in this movement was stated by administration leaders to be the necessity for finding some means by which the decreased armament, to be agreed upon here, can be extended to include other nations.

The scrapping and snarling of the minor nations are fully as potential of world conflicts as is that of the bigger nations, the President believes.

DISARMAMENT IS SECONDARY, DAS ASSERTS

Writer Sees Anglo-American-Japanese Alliance as Main Issue of Conference

By TARAKNATH DAS,
Author of "Is Japan a Menace to Asia?"

Washington, Nov. 26.—It is now quite clear to all who are interested that the main issue of the Washington conference is not merely limitation of armaments. The conference is holding its sessions for nations' ultimes, but primarily for an Anglo-American-Japanese understanding.

The Washington conference has begun where the Paris Peace Conference was left. In the Paris Peace Conference, the question which interested the American public most—the question of freedom of the seas—was ditched to satisfy England, as she was determined not to budge an inch from her position as the first naval power in the world.

The Paris conference gave the imperialist nations more territories taken from the central powers. The League of Nations was planned to secure American support in consolidating these newly acquired territories. America did not join the League because the nation repudiated the idea of a League of Nations planned to further the interest of imperialist nations.

BRITAIN SUPREME.

The British and French statesmen in Paris planned an Anglo-American-French alliance with the consent of Mr. Wilson, but the American Senate threw this idea of an entangling alliance overboard.

In the Washington conference we find that the British are getting the upper hand and the conference may be rightly called a British conference held in Washington.

The net result of the American proposal is that Britain remains the supreme arbiter of the seas. Britain retains the largest merchant ships. These could, in time of war, be transformed into cruisers to the disadvantage of America. Such a naval holiday as proposed would leave Britain supreme to all other nations without spending a cent.

Mr. Hughes' proposition of reduction of naval armaments of America, Britain and Japan and ignoring France in the Pacific is the reflex of British diplomacy which wishes to isolate France because of growing estrangement between France and Britain in the Mediterranean region and Asia Minor and in Europe.

The Washington conference is carrying out Lloyd George's idea of enlarging the Anglo-Japanese alliance to Anglo-American-Japanese understanding.

PREDICTS REPUDIATION.

Lloyd George expounded this theory in his speech before the Parliament after the Imperial Conference defending renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance. Lord Riddel on Monday stated very clearly to Washington newspaper men that the Anglo-Japanese alliance must be widened to an agreement between America, Japan and Britain regarding the Pacific problems or permitted to remain as it is.

This is the British scheme. The Japanese Cabinet has sounded the note and we hear that even the representatives of Australia advocate this scheme.

The American people appear widely enthusiastic regarding the disarmament conference and its achievement. They will be less enthusiastic and will be eager to repudiate it if they know that Anglo-American-Japanese understanding is one of the prime motives of this conference at the cost of all American interests.

DENIES FRENCH PREMIER BELITTLED ITALIANS

Rome, Nov. 26.—Emphatic denial of the report that Premier Briand of France, had made remarks derogatory of the Italian army to Signor Schanzer, head of the Italian delegation at Washington, was contained in an official statement issued by Della Sera, from its correspondent at the American capital today. An attack upon the French consulate and heated discussions in the Senate and Chamber of Deputies resulted from circulation of the erroneous report.

BRIGHTON MOTHER AND CHILD HURT IN AUTO

Mrs. Anna Corinne of No. 18 Hobart street, Brighton, her four-year-old son, Silvio, and Nevada Lisi of High street, Chelmsford, were hurled to the pavement today when Stilz, who was driving, lost control his automobile in front of two trolley cars at Washington and Parkbanke street, Brighton. Silk was unhurt, but the mother and child sustained injuries that found them in St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Brighton.

"DEAD TRAIN" TIES UP SERVICE IN TUNNEL

A "dead train" in the Washington street tunnel tied up traffic for about 40 minutes during the rush hour last night and as a result, the Paris street subway station was jammed by thousands of homeward bound.

Occupants of the stalled train were forced to keep their seats until the could be assistance. Subway service from Everett was diverted via the Atlantic avenue loop.

'ALL-BRITISH' TROUSSEAU FOR MARY

Princess Shatters Hopes of Paris by Her Demands for Wedding Outfit

By Universal Service.

London, Nov. 26.—Princess Mary is choosing her trousseau, and has issued an ultimatum that it must be "all British."

With this announcement the fervent expectations of Rue De La Paix designers, who are already sending representatives to London to submit designs, are rudely shattered.

Princess Mary intends, according to information from court circles, to let officers' families, and industries composed of wives of officers killed in the war, do all the work possible, even to the making of the wedding dress.

The decision of the Princess will prove a tremendous fillip for the British dress industry, as the whole court will follow the lead of the Princess. The Bond street jewelers are jubilant because, coming in the middle of the dull season, the wedding will mean a great increase in business through the purchase of presents for the royal bride.

The early honeymoon will be spent in Yorkshire, to be followed, probably, by a trip around the world, with a visit to America.

The Lord Mayor of London has opened a fund to enable citizens to subscribe for a present to the Princess. It is hoped to raise at least half a million dollars throughout England.

The Queen of Rumania will come to England for the wedding, bringing her youngest daughter, who will be a bridesmaid.

High Tariff On Books Opposed by Eastern College Libraries

By Associated Press

New York, Nov. 26.—Opposition to the high tariff on books in the Fordney bill was voiced today at the conference of Eastern College Libraries at Columbia University. Thirty colleges, represented by 150 delegates, were represented.

M. L. Raney, librarian of Johns Hopkins University, declared a high tariff on books would be harmful to many public libraries and educational institutions, because it would prevent them from purchasing necessary library equipment.

The question of the legality of protecting the printing industry at the expense of the educational institutions was raised.

Maybe your husband discovered our Bond

REMEMBER the night your husband said: "You look tired tonight; why don't you sleep late tomorrow?"

And you replied: "But I have to get up at six o'clock and set the dough."

"That's foolish," he said.

"Foolish," you echoed—"perhaps so—but would you be willing to eat bread I didn't bake myself?" And he hesitated—and you got up at six o'clock as on every other baking morning.

Perhaps it was that very night that he looked up from his newspaper and said:

"Look here; this reads like something I'd be willing to take a chance on. Here is a bread that is guaranteed with a Bond on every wrapper. It absolutely certifies that only the purest home ingredients are used in the baking, and they call the bread Bond Bread. Let's try it once and see."

So husbands sometimes have their uses around the house after all. That Bond proved to be a Liberty Bond so far as you are concerned.

It freed you from the long ordeal of those baking days—forever.

Bonded to be as pure as your home made

Harding to Urge Revocation on American Vessels to Smooth Out Conference

By NORMAN HAPGOOD.
Staff Correspondent, Boston American

Washington, Nov. 25.—In actual progress at the conference, China held the stage alone Friday. The conferees all agreed to give up the rights of exterritoriality immediately, provided the execution of Chinese laws is up to the standard of the code submitted by the Chinese, which were unanimously held to be of high quality.

The question of leaving China to handle the whole postal service, abolishing the foreign postoffices, was brought up, and Mr. Hughes stated that the different countries would be expected to deliver their opinions on this subject today. The United States has one postoffice, the British twelve, the French thirteen and the Japanese 128.

It was also announced that today the Far Eastern committee will take up questions of foreign troops on Chinese soil, foreign police and wireless stations.

In addition to such actual business put through, the following matters developed:

1—It became known that President Harding has decided to send a message to Congress setting forward the impracticability of enforcing at the present time section thirty-four of the Merchant Marine act, giving preferential rates on goods shipped in American vessels. This connects itself with the conference in the general relief that the impracticability referred to means the probability that the work of the delegates would proceed less smoothly if questions relating to ocean shipping were pressed at this time.

2—Much more emphatic statements were given than ever before, in official circles, to the belief of the President that the following steps would be natural, agreeable to him, and expected by him, as an individual. It being always pointed out that they are for the conference, not for him, to determine:

ALL NATIONS TO RATIFY.

A—That the agreements reached will be submitted to other nations, small and large, for ratification; that in the case of most of the nations the ratification will probably be at another conference, but that in the case of a few countries, INCLUDING GERMANY, the ratification should be at the present conference.

B—That the form in which the agreements are put by the conference is of no importance. In the opinion of the President a gentleman's agreement is as likely to hold as a treaty.

C—That Mr. Harding's association of nations should grow out of the increase in the agreements reached and the increase in the number of nations brought in to ratify these agreements.

LEADS TO ARMIES.

Commenting on this bold and full statement of the administration's intentions it was said that Congress has been carefully consulted and that the President is convinced that only a handful will oppose his plan.

Also it was said that Congress would no more think of building battleships in opposition to an Executive agreement that the President would think of tying all the battleships up to the wharves, as he could literally do, acting as commander-in-chief.

3—While no technical steps were taken about land armaments, the position in which that subject is left by the Briand episode was made clear. It is believed that work now being done on the quantity, character and the use of aircraft to be permitted, on the use of gas and on the whole question of war ethics, may lead the committee far into the general question of land armaments.

WANG DENIES FRICTION.

4—The French position and Lord Curzon's attack on it was the subject most discussed in conversations outside the committee rooms. In addition to the objections fully put by the British there is a special Italian objection that the French naval program is based on the desire to hold a route by which a million colored troops can be transported to Europe.

5—Dr. Wang of the Chinese delegation absolutely denied the printed story of friction between the British and Chinese. Mr. Hughes made an equally sweeping denial of the same rumor. The Secretary of State also denied, with repeated thoroughness, that there was the slightest excuse or basis for the printing of another story to the effect that Mr. Balfour had objected to the method o ftaking minutes. Mr. Hughes said the subject had not given rise to any discussion by anybody.

ASKS ABROGATION.

The Chinese statement on the subjects already mentioned was very long. Dr. Chung-Hui Wang, of the Supreme Court of China, pointed out that extra-territoriality went back almost to the beginning of treaty relations with foreign powers, when there were only five treaty ports, whereas now there are fifty, besides an equal number of places open to foreign trade on China's own initiative.

This great increase not only increases China's humiliation over the derogation of her sovereign rights, but gives rise to multiplicity of courts, uncertainty of law, troubles about taxation and other vexations. Therefore China asks for the abrogation of these treaty extra-territorial rights at the end of a definite period.

The position taken by the committee has been indicated earlier in this article.

JAPS SYMPATHETIC.

Mr. Tze, the Chinese minister, presented the general Chinese case on several topics to the committee. When he had finished speeches were made successively by Rene Viviani, Mr. Balfour, Baron Schanzer and Mr. Hanihara. A striking aspect of the meeting was that the most sympathetic of all the speeches was Mr. Hanihara, he calling attention to the fact that Japan had suffered for thirty years from the same kind of foreign interference.

"He signed a contract with me," Jean protested. "If Mr. Bernard can help me——"

Jean thought she did.

Then she made her way unsteadily to the street. The June sun shone hot and brilliant on the matinee crowds. Everything seemed clean-cut, harsh, brutal.

NEW MYSTERY PLAY AT WILBUR

"The Nightcap" Has Nothing to Do With Prohibition, but Deals With Thrills

Of the array of plays that have reached the Boston stages during the new theatrical season, we have had a number of comedies and dramas, but musical shows have, for the most part, had things more or less their own way.

On Monday night at the Wilbur Theatre comes the first mystery play of the year, without which no theatrical collection seems complete. "The Nightcap" is a blending of adventure, comedy and mystery, with the latter quality by far the most important.

Because of the nature of the piece, nothing is known of the story. It is permissible, however, to judge of the merit of the play from the fact that the co-authors are well known in the theatrical world. Max Marcin, doubtless, is responsible for the thrills of the piece, since his former hits have had something of that quality in them. He was the author of "Cheating Cheaters," "Eyes of Youth," "The House of Glass" and "The Woman in Room 13." Guy Bolton, on the other hand, is known for his comedies, "Polly With a Past," "Adam and Eva," "Very Good Eddie," "Oh, Boy," "Oh, Lady, Lady" and others.

While the cast boasts of no stars or featured players, it is an evenly balanced one. Elizabeth Risdon heads the list, which includes Flora Sheffield, Jerome Patrick, Grant Mills, John Daly Murphy, Jack Rafael, Dudley Hawley and others. Miss Risdon was known but a few years ago as a player in the more staid English comedies of Bernard Shaw and Pinero.

MAGICIAN THURSTON BACK.

Following the engagement of Florence Reed at the Selwyn Theatre, comes Thurston, the Magician, for two weeks. With his rapid-fire talk, his spectacular tricks, and his mysterious illusions, Thurston continues to be the most successful of his type of entertainer in this country.

He comes this season with a new bevfol of tricks, an enlarged company and picturesque scenic effects. The illusion of sawing a woman in half continues to be his leading feature.

TWO OPERAS AT THE ARLINGTON

For their eighth week at the Arlington Theatre the Boston Society of Singers have chosen "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci." The full strength of the entire company will be given in every performance.

Emma Ainslee will be heard in "Cavalleria Rusticana" as the wronged Santuzza. Miss Ainslee's voice is particularly adapted to the dramatic moments of her intense role. Rulon Robinson will sing the role of Turridu, while Miss Elberry handles that of the saucy Lola, and Mr. Northway that of Alfio.

In "I Pagliacci," Stanley Deacon will sing Tonio, the greatest role of his repertoire. Miss Helena Morrill will make a striking Nedda and Mr. Arnold will sing Canio.

TRACKED THEADOR.

When Otis Skinner decided to play the role of Juan Galiardo, the bull fighter in "Blood and Sand," holding forth at Hollis Street Theatre, he didn't immediately plunge into rehearsals and gather data for same from books. He set sail for Spain to discuss the situation with Ibanez and to watch the toreadors at close range.

After several days spent with Ibanez in his home in Madrid, the writer and the American actor ran over to Seville to meet Juan Garcia Belmonte, the foremost bullfighter of the world today.

"I expected," said Mr. Skinner the other day, "to find a man of action, somewhat callous and brutal, and above all, busy. Instead of that he was a quiet, self-contained man of twenty-eight years old, and of great dignity and politeness.

"Already he has made more than a million American dollars in corridas, and has built more than one fine country hills. During the war he went to Lima, where he married the most beautiful girl in Peru, and was paid 50,000 for an afternoon's work. All in all, it seemed a profitable visit, didn't it?"

BLINN CAN REALLY DO IT.

For those who discount the heroic doings of stage heroes and dismiss their heroism with the remark, "Oh, he's just acting," it is well that Holbrook Blinn, who shoots from the hip and transacts business with Latin imptunosity in "The Bad Man," at the Plymouth Theatre, is quite capable of doing all that Pancho Lopez does.

On horseback he is perfectly at home, having practically lived in the saddle during his boyhood in California. His home on the Hudson boasts a stableful of blue ribbon winners. As for his shooting prowess, Dr. Blinn can tear off the end of a package of cigarettes at thirty paces and at the same distance hit a copper penny, which, as Mr. Blinn himself remarks "isn't bad for an actor, but not so good for a sharpshooter."

As for physical endurance, Mr. Blinn is no mean master-builder. He not only designed a perfectly equipped theatre for his Summer home, but virtually built it himself. It is safe to say that should Blinn decide to become a "bad man" for the screen, there will be one star who needs no one to "double" for him.

OWN YOUR OWN HOSPITAL.

When Douglas Fairbanks goes out "on location," not only does his technical director make arrangements for the entire company, a commissary department, the technical staff and the cameramen, but gets together a first-aid staff with ambulance and hospital cots. "That's the sort of work that "Doug" does.

During the filming of "The Three Musketeers," drawing crowds to the Globe Theatre at present, a former hospital steward and complete first aid outfit were kept constantly on the set. Joseph Rideaux, the steward, was formerly chief steward at the Los Angeles Emergency Hospital. Considering the amount of duelling that was called for, Rideaux doesn't yet understand why there was no more work for him than there was. But as "Doug" cheerfully put it, "They'd rather pay Rideaux to do nothing than to have him really earn his money."

VICTOR HUGO DRAMA ON SCREEN

What is said to be one of the most spectacular and dramatic motion pictures ever filmed will be seen at the Modern and Beacon Theatres next week. It is a photoplay version of a universally known drama by Victor Hugo and bears the title, "Judgment."

The story deals with those grim days in Sixteenth Century England, when Mary Tudor sat upon the throne, and gained for herself the sinister heritage of her memory, the name "Bloody Mary."

"Judgment" was filmed abroad, and the role of Mary Tudor is played by a continental actress, Ellen Richter, who, in Europe, played the same role in a recent revival of that drama upon the stage.

A strikingly human theme develops with consummate skill, makes "A Wife's Awakening," the second feature a motion picture of unusual entertainment value.

MARY CLARK RECITAL.

Mary Clark, soprano, will appear in Jordan Hall on Saturday afternoon, December 3. Her program will comprise French, Russian, German, and English and American numbers. She will also sing the "Aditza notte" aria from Boito's "Mefistofele." Henry Levine will be the accompanist.

HOWARD ATHENAEUM

The pictures of the Dempsey-Carpinter boxing contest for the world's heavyweight championship, which was held in New Jersey on July 4, will be the top card beginning Monday. The Harum-Scarum Burlesque company will be another attraction.

GREEKS CLAIM ROME AS THEIRS

While the Italians, through their director, Commendatore Ambrosio, and the Unione Cinematografica Italiana may justly claim credit for filming Sardou's "Theodora," playing at the Shubert Theatre, against a scenic background which, as one critic puts it, "has never been surpassed, if equalled, in the history of motion pictures," the Greeks claim that, historically, at least, this background belongs to them. In the Greek coffee houses in this city there has been excited discussion concerning this hypothesating an ancient Greek city.

They point out the historical fact that Philip of Macedon conquered Byzantium and long before the Christian era it was accounted a Greek city. Roman arms later dominated Hellas but Roman domination did not change the character of the city of Byzantium, the bulk of whose population was Greek. Support of this statement they cite the fact that Byzantium art and architecture was basically Greek rather than Roman, and with the Oriental variations which made it almost Saracenic in decorations.

Coming down to the time of "Theodora" the Greeks declare that this lively lady was born on the Island of Cyprus; that Emperor Justinian himself was Thracian while Belisarius, the greatest Roman general of his age, was born and bred among Thracian peasants. He it was who reconquered Rome from the Goths, and made "The Eternal City" again a part of the Empire—under a Greek guard.

PLAYS THAT REMAIN

OTIS SKINNER in "Blood and Sand," adapted by Tom Cushing from Ibanez's novel, gives a satisfying and picturesque performance as the colorful toreador. Hollis Street Theatre.

"THE BAD MAN," with Holbrook Blinn scoring a distinct hit as the entertaining bandit, starts its fifth week of satire and melodrama at the Plymouth Theatre.

"TWO LITTLE GIRLS IN BLUE" starts the last week of a very profitable engagement here next Monday at the Colonial Theatre. A tuneful musical comedy featuring the Fairbanks Twins.

"THE LOVE LETTER" also starts the last week of its Boston engagement on Monday. This musical attraction at the Tremont Theatre is notable particularly for its fine singing.

THE BIG FILMS

"THEODORA" continues a second week at the Shubert Theatre, where this Italian production is drawing.

"THE THREE MUSKETEERS" continues as the attraction at the Globe Theatre, where Douglas Fairbanks is proving remarkably popular.

GAYETY THEATRE

"A Whirl of Gayety" will begin an engagement of one week on Monday. Micky Markwood, known as one of the funniest comedians in the burlesque world, heads the large cast. He is assisted in his nonsense by Nadine Gray, Walter Brown, May Hamilton, Scully and Ellis, Harlie Mason, Penelope Dean, Leon Devoe, the Duley Twins and others.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA

Popular song lovers will be attracted this week by the appearance of the authors and composers of the most widely known songs known to the American public. Among those who will appear in this act, "A Trip to Hitland," are Bobby Jones, Billy Frisch, Bernie Grossman, Leon Flatow, Ed Rose, Will Donaldson, Ted Shapiro, Willy White, Martin Fried, Hal Burton.

GORDON'S SCOLLAY SQ.

Combining three popular figures of the screen—Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson and Elliot Dexter—comes "Don't Tell Everything," which will be seen beginning Monday. As an extra added attraction, Harold Lloyd's newest comedy, "I Do," will be shown for the first time in Boston. Other attractions include a few short film subjects and a program of vaudeville.

FRED STONE AT COLONIAL

For the holiday attraction at the Colonial Theatre, commencing Monday night, December 5, Charles Dillingham will present Fred Stone in "Tip Top." Some of the comedian's companion players include the Six Brown Brothers, the Duncan Sisters, the sixteen London Palace Girls and the Globe Theatre chorus.

ALL STAR BILL SCHEDULED FOR KEITH'S

Another all-star bill will be presented at Keith's Theatre next week. Chic Sale, champion delineator of rural types; Anatol Friedland, the man who wrote 1,000 melodies; Roger Imhoff, Sybil Vane, Doyle and Cavanaugh, and the Avon Comedy Four are among the headliners.

"Chic" Sale will be seen in his "Rural Sunday School Entertainment," a popular bit of character acting. Roger Imhoff and Marceite Correene and their supporting players will present "In A Pent House."

Anatol Friedland will appear in a revue of mirth, melody and dance, supported by Emily Stead, Louise Carroll and Vera Gordin.

"MR. PIM PASSES BY"

A. L. Erlanger will present "Mr. Pim Passes By," the comedy by A. A. Milne, at the Hollis Street Theatre, Monday, December 5. With Miss Laura Hope Crews heading a really fine company of players, this theatre guild success has gained unusual favor.

GORDON'S OLD SOUTH

William S. Hart in "White Oak" is the headline photoplay attraction next week. Many other excellent photoplay features and short subjects complete the program.

SOMERVILLE PLAYERS

"Over the Hill" will be the offering for the coming week. Jessamine Newcombe makes her advent to the Somerville Players' popularity and distinction. Enid Markey and Arthur Howard and all the other favorites will be seen at their best.

SANDSTORM FIGURES IN "SHEIK"

The great wind machine was working its hardest in a desert sandstorm scene of "The Sheik," which George Melford was producing for Paramount, and which will come to the Park Theatre tomorrow. The millions of particles were swirling at a high rate of speed as Agnes Ayres and Rudolph Valentino were engaged in a dramatic scene.

"Stop the engine," called Melford. Obediently the mechanic switched off the aeroplane motor, which was raising so much dust, but the sand continued to fly.

"What the deuce—" began Melford. "Don't I tell you to stop that sandstorm?"

Then everybody realized that a real sandstorm had come up during the artificial one. They crawled under cover and for five minutes the air was almost unbreathable.

"If we'd waited five or ten minutes," grumbled the producer, "we might have saved a lot of gasoline."

LOEW'S ORPHEUM

The feature attraction next week will be "The Sheik," with Rudolph Valentine and Agnes Ayres in the principal roles. There will be five acts of vaudeville. For the closing half the program will include "The Sheik" and new vaudeville.

"ONLY 38"

On Monday evening, December 5, Sam H. Harris will present the comedy by A. E. Thomas, "Only 38," which comes direct from New York with the original cast headed by Mary Ryan.

SPECTACLE OPENS RUN HERE

"Queen of Sheba" Comes to Tremont Temple After Success in New York

It is with the hope of duplicating the remarkable run of his earlier film, "Over the Hill," that William Fox sends "The Queen of Sheba" to open a run at Tremont Temple on Monday afternoon. This film was an unqualified success with Broadway audiences during its long engagement in New York, and was frequently compared, and very favorably, with the early Griffith spectacles, "Intolerance" and others.

The only thing that "The Queen of Sheba" has in common with "Over the Hill," is the fact that they have both proved phenomenal successes with their audiences. For the rest, "The Queen of Sheba" is sensational both in story and execution, as "Over the Hill" was homely and quaint.

Betty Blythe achieved her first real success in this picture, after several seasons of playing "bits" and "heavies." Miss Blythe has long been known among the film players of Hollywood as the most beautiful woman on the screen. For some unexplained reason she has failed—until she appeared as Sheba—to become a favorite with the motion picture fans. As this queen, she gives a performance that sends her into the front ranks of the movie players of note.

THE TRIUMPH OF YOUTH.

The outstanding characteristic, of one of them, is the fact that it is the spirit of youth that prevails throughout the organization of "The Love Letter," now holding forth at the Tremont Theatre.

John Charles Thomas, in the front rank of baritones, is one of the youngest to have won recognition. The supporting company is made up of many players who are barely out of their teens. Marjorie Gateson, comedienne and Carolyn Thomson, the prima donna, are examples, while Fred and Adele Astaire are said to be the youngest of all the teams of specialty dancers.

MAJESTIC THEATRE

The headliner who tops the program for the coming week is Nora Bayes. This comedienne will sing her inimitable songs as only Nora Bayes can "put them over."

Another feature will be "In Argentina," with Harry Ormond, Ellen Deliste and Roberte Medrane, Matilde and Elvira, and a company of Argentine players. Others on the bill include Jeveddah de Rajah, India's mystic, assisted by Princess Olga, the girl who can't talk; and Harry Hines, "The Fifty-eighth Variety," Miss Everest, with her circus of monkeys; and the Leech Wallin Trio.

WHAT FOLKS ARE DOING IN AND OUT OF THE BOSTON THEATRES

THE FUSION OF "BLOOD AND SAND"! An interesting moment from the dramatic adaptation of the Ibanez novel, now current at the Hollis Street Theatre, with Otis Skinner and Catherine Calvert propelling the stellar roles.

A few gay ladies in "A Whirl of Gayety" at the Gayety. Who can deny they are not as pretty and as smartly garbed as those in the so-called big revues?

MRS. ALFRED SZE, wife of Chinese Minister at arms parley, closely watches the progress of the conference and daily advises her brilliant husband. Considered one of most beautiful women in China. (Int.)

OH, SHOOT! Bold, bad mail bandits had better beware, 'cause the lady postal employes are learning to wield a gat. Here is Sergt. Currie, formerly a Marine and once the second best shot in U. S., teaching N. Y. girl postal workers the art of "picking 'em off." (F.)

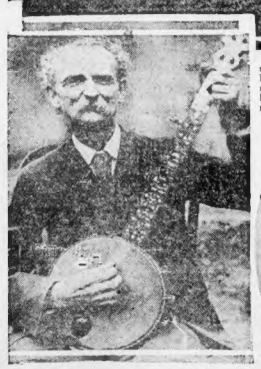
HE was no gentleman! Here is the scene that starts the fireworks in "The Bad Man," with Holbrook Blinn, at the Plymouth. Fred Tildes and Leah Peck are the mummers.

IT wasn't so very long ago that Enid Markey, now with the Somerville Players, was a leading filmite. However, her artistry (and the stage, too) has been enriched by the desertion.

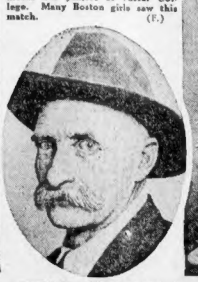
FOR THE MATINEE! Sweet little chapeau of tan velour, medium brimmed and crushed of crown, is set off with an encircling wreath of Autumn flowers—an ideal hat for general wear. (U. & U.)

PRIZES FOR EVERYBODY! Mrs. P. P. Epstein, 878 Park St., Woonsocket, R. I., is a charming motorist. She is awarded $5. Send in your prettiest motor photo. You may win a prize. Address Pictorial Editor.

IRVING SIDMAN, all-America basketball guard of 1920, a fast, brilliant player, who is wearing the uniform of the All-New England Club this season. Starred on Cornell squad.



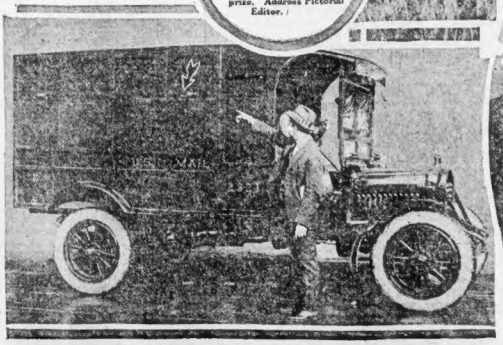
AND JOE PLAYED HIS OL' BANJO! Prof. Joe Paterson of Eastport, Me., one of the few original blackface comedians, has retired after 50 years as a minstrel. He has traveled 64,000 miles. Shown with his hand-made banjo. (U. P.)



OW, WHAT A SHORT NAME! Ed Ow, 60, of Owensmouth, Cal., has the shortest name of any person in the U. S. It's so short nobody takes it seriously. Well, brevity is the soul of wit.

HURDLING OR HOCKEY! A remarkable action photo of a field hockey game between the sophomores and juniors at Vassar College. Many Boston girls saw this match. (F.)

GOLDEN TOES! No tight-fitting shoes adorned these beautiful feet, you can rest assured. Mrs. Lottie Donovan, 39, mother of a 15-year-old boy, has the prettiest feet of any woman in N. Y., experts agreed. She attributes her comely feet to the wearing of "sensible" shoes. (Int.)



BOSTON IS DUE FOR SOME OF THESE! With the list of mail robberies steadily growing, the postal authorities are taking every precaution to protect the valuables and mail entrusted to Uncle Sam's care. In New York all-steel armored trucks will be used in the future. Photo shows machine with muzzle of guard's rifle protruding through one of the gun ports. (Int.)

ALEXA STIRLING, national golf champion for five years, will henceforth divide her time between awatting the pill and selling bonds. She has gone into business in N. Y.

CHAFING FAULT REMEDIED IN ROYAL CORD

New Smaller Sized Tire Put Out by United States Company Proves Success

A new line in production of the 30x3½ clincher cord tire for Fords and other small cars the United States Tire Company has kept in close touch with the arguments rendered by the several thousand users of the Royal Cord Universal and to the conclusion that there was a common fault in all of them—the chafing—and, in the development of the Royal Cord in that size particular attention was given to correcting the condition.

The solution of the trouble lies in the use of a 3¼x4 tube in all 30x3½ clincher cord casings.

It will be found that this recommendation applies only to clincher cord tires and does not apply to straight-side tires. The design of the straight-side tire is such that a tube of the same nominal size as the casing is satisfactory in all cases.

TUBES MADE LONGER.

All tubes for clincher tires are made somewhat longer in proportion to the size of the casing than tubes for wire, base tires.

The object in making the tube longer is to keep it well away from the beads so it will not be pinched when the tire is applied on the rim. When the tube is pinched in this manner it is very likely that it will be punctured by the rim edge when the tire is removed from the rim and [illegible] tube. Longer tubes are [illegible] of this kind.

AIR CHAMBER LARGER.

In a cord tire the air chamber within the casing is much larger than in a fabric tire. Consequently, this stretch at the beads is so great that the tube is thinned down at that point to a degree where a little [illegible] on the bead from will [illegible] through. This has been [illegible] the [illegible] tube.

RUTH DEMANDS $60,000 FOR 1922 SEASON

Swat King Coolly Asks New York Yankees to Double His Pay Next Season

By Universal Service

New York, Nov. 28.—Babe Ruth, baseball's greatest slugger, has asked the New York Yankees for a contract calling for $60,000 for the 1922 season.

A letter from the world's champion baseball batsman, containing the request for a $60,000 contract, was received by Col. Jacob Ruppert, president of the Yankees, this morning.

It is possible that if Ruth sticks to his demand the New York baseball club may ask other American League clubs to chip in a few thousand.

GET-RICH-QUICK WALLINGFORD

A Delightful Serial of Adventure, Intrigue and the Triumph of Love Over Dishonesty

("Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" is a Cosmopolitan Production based on some of the famous Wallingford stories and the famous play by George M. Cohan, directed by Frank Borzage and released as a Paramount Picture.)

Screen Version Novelized

By Jane McLean

I came up to the office to make you promise to come to dinner Sunday—mother wants you," said Dorothy to Blackie Daw. "You know she's almost as fond of you as I am—and so is father—why, anyone'd think you were the Prince of Wales the way he's asking if this has been done and that has been done——"

"Sunday! Oh, did I say I'd come Sunday?" Poor Mr. Daw looked helplessly at Wallingford, but got no encouragement. "I'll be there," he managed to stammer. "I'll be counting the hours till then." There was a tremor in his voice that excited the alarm of the girl. "Why, Horace, what's the matter—has something happened, you don't seem a bit glad, really."

"Oh, I'm glad enough," he cried, as Wallingford discreetly slipped from the room, "do you want me to prove it—I can, you know." And he took her in his arms and kissed her, but not quite soon enough to escape the curious eye of the intending Willie. That young man was visibly embarrassed.

And Willie Sees Them

"What you two doing, playing postoffice?" he asked. He turned to go into the room where Wallingford was busy with Fannie and backed out. "Gee, they're playing it, too—this ain't no place for me."

Willie showed his wisdom by departing to the laughter of Horace Daw and the blushes of Dorothy and the bonus inquiry of Wallingford if he didn't know enough to knock before he entered a room.

"By the way, Dorothy, Fanny wants to see you," said the master juggler, holding the door open for her to pass.

"You'll wait for me, Horace?" she called over her shoulder, "you're going home with me, you know."

The door closed and Wallingford came up to his old pal. "Say, I've got a secret for you—I've just had my first real kiss——"

"So have I," said Blackie, "and Dorothy's father is in the Tack Co.

The Action to Date

J. Rufus Wallingford and his accomplice, Horace Daw, known as "Blackie," descend on the little town of Battlesburg, Iowa, with intent to fleece the citizens through a bogus manufacturing scheme. Daw comes first, and after lauding Wallingford to the skies, the master schemer appears. He decides on the spur of the moment to build a factory for the making of covered carpet tacks, and his enthusiasm and promises carry away the chief moneyed men of the town. Eddie Lamb, the hotel clerk, forces $10,000 in cash on Wallingford to invest. Everything is going swimmingly, but Daw has fallen in love with Dorothy Weller, daughter of a real estate dealer, and Wallingford has lost his heart to pretty Fannie Jasper, the hotel stenographer. Fannie, having refused to go to Wallingford's room to take letters, has been discharged by Dempsey, the hotel proprietor, and Wallingford, apologizing, has offered her a post as his secretary, which she accepts. Wallingford introduces her to the directors of the new company.

When the skies seem darkest, Wallingford gets a million for his trolley franchise. A lively scene from "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford."

I'd like to give him back his money."

"I wish we could give it all back —isn't it the devil, Blackie?" They stood, both of them, hands in pockets soon to be lined with their victim's gold and stared helplessly at the floor. Should they or should they not hand back their ill-acquired cash and start out on the straight and narrow path?

There was time and to spare, but neither had reached a decision when Willie opened the door and announced a gentleman to see Mr. Wallingford.

"Another boob, I suppose," said J. Rufus. "Show him in, Willie."

He took his seat at his desk and glanced at his pal.

"It's Saturday morning then?" queried Blackie.

"Not on your life, we won't leave till midnight."

"I hope to high heaven the train's ten hours late," cried Blackie, as a thick-set man entered the room without troubling to remove his hat.

Mr. Wallingford did not like his look; he resembled too much the plain clothes policeman of the big city; he cast an apprehensive glance at Mr. Daw, across whose mind the same thought had flitted.

Mr. Lott wasted no time. "You're Mr. J. Rufus Wallingford?" he questioned, speaking with his cigar still in his mouth.

"I'm the man," said Wallingford, with a sinking at his heart.

"Well, I'm from Des Moines, M. B. Lott. I represent the Midland Valley Traction Company.

"Pleased to meet you," cried Wallingford, rising to shake hands as much from relief as for politeness. "This is my chief lieutenant, Mr. Daw."

"I'm her to talk about your Battlesburg-Hoytsville line. I'd like to make an appointment so that we can——"

"Wallingford interrupted him. "I never make appointments, Mr. Lott; if you want to talk business with me, here I am—and now's the time to talk it—it's yes or no with me; that's the kind of a man I am——"

"Suits me," said Mr. Lott. "The Midland Railroad within the past two months has consolidated with the Golden West Group of Trolleys—we're interested in this line of yours and we'd like to purchase—if within twenty-four hours you can give us an idea——"

A Man of Action

Again Wallingford cut him short. "It doesn't take me twenty-four hours—twenty-four seconds are all I want—if the Midland people can really," and he tossed a telegraph blank to his caller, "there you are, do business as fast as I can, I'm wire your people I'll sell all I've got in the new line—franchise, right of way and good will for one million dollars—half cash."

And then Mr. Wallingford received the shock of his life and then Mr. Daw sank weakly into a chair and put his hand to his mouth to keep from hysterics. "That's just the offer I came prepared to make," said Mr. Lott. "Now, sir, if you'll come to Des Moines on the five-forty, I'll guarantee to close the matter by ten tomorrow morning."

"All right, Mr. Lott, I'm with you —we have half an hour to make the station."

"See you there, then—I've got to get a phone message through. Where's a booth?"

"End of the hall, to your right," answered Wallingford weakly. And as he went out the two confidence men stared at each other and the same thought was in the minds of each; only Wallingford, shaking a little, cried, "Blackie, did you hear what I heard?"

"I heard," almost sniffled Blackie —"we've got a fortune, a legitimate fortune——"

"We're a couple of honest men, Blackie," said Wallingford, as though he had made a great discovery.

"Yes, and we never knew it—I move we tell the girls," but before they could get out of the room a familiar voice smote on their ears —a familiar face appeared from the hall and Eddie Lamb, fatter and more smiling than ever, propelled himself into the room.

"Gosh," the voice of Daw and Wallingford united in one anguished word.

HER OWN WAY

STORY OF A YOUNG GIRL'S STRUGGLE

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

HE knew how to order a good dinner, the girl reflected now. She herself was enjoying food for the first time since her illness.

Her surroundings were bringing her out of her morbid broodings. If late she had had only two moods—one was softness; the other weary indifference. One had increased the other.

But now she smiled frequently at some anecdotes related by her companion. Observers supposed they were father and daughter enjoying each other's society.

When dinner was over Daniel Sloane asked a question.

"Have you any engagement for this evening?"

"No, sir," Helen answered. Then she added, "I don't often have engagements. I have made too few acquaintances for that."

"What about Miss Mayo? You are not living with her now, I understand."

"No, sir, I am not." Helen felt the blood steal into her cheeks. "She is to be married very soon."

"Ah? That leaves you without a home, then. Was that the reason you moved?"

"No; I decided to move soon after you were here last Fall, I felt that it would be much better for me to go on my own, as it were."

Matters to Discuss

"I see," pushing back his chair from the table. "What I was about to suggest is that you give me the next hour or two if you can spare it. There are several matters I would like to talk over with you."

Helen followed his lead from the dining room to the elevator. When he and she were once more in the luxurious sitting room on the eleventh floor he moved forward an easy chair for her, then dropped into another.

"What are your plans?" he asked.

"I have no very definite plans." She girl answered hesitatingly. "I have not looked ahead much.

"I would like to make myself so important to Miss Thorne—she is the woman at the head of the department in which I am employed—that after a while my pay will be increased, and I can be more certain of my position at Terriberry's.

"I hope I am making good now—but I would like to be sure that I am valuable to the concerns."

"And then?"

Helen looked at him. "And then —I do not know what."

"You have no idea as to what you will do with your life—even if you make yourself indispensable? If that is possible—to your present employers?"

"I do not think I have," Helen answered.

She felt a strange relief in talking to this elderly man whom she could trust—her mother's brother.

After a moment's silence she spoke again. "I have often felt since I came to New York that I wanted my own little apartment, where my friend could be alone, or suite of rooms, where I might place that belonged to me. That is the only thing that I am really looking forward to."

A Homesick Girl

"A solitary home is not always a cheerful place for a woman," the man mused aloud. "Nor for a man, either for that matter. Perhaps you are too young to appreciate that fact."

"No," she said, frankly, "I am not too young. I appreciate it perfectly."

"Have you been homesick?"

The question was asked suddenly. The speaker was leaning forward in his chair, searching the face of the girl creature opposite him. As she looked into those dark eyes—with the strange pain in them—she would have felt it a sacrifice to prevaricate.

"Yes," simply. "I have been so homesick, so unhappy, that I have wanted to die."

He stretched out his hand and laid it on hers for an instant.

"Poor child! But—you may marry."

"I shall never marry," she told him.

He did not smile at the words. "Perhaps you may not," he rejoined. "I never did. But—will the woman I wanted did not want me.

"But never mind about that! I'm an old man now—and a lonely old man. I have a big, empty house. It might be a home with two of us in it."

"Helen, I vowed never to ask you again to come to me. I was angry with you. I did not know as much as I know now. But—if you care to live in my home—if you could put up with me—the house is open to you, my child."

"No, do not try to give me an answer now." Daniel Sloane protested when his niece started to speak. "I am making a plain proposition to you, and you may take your own time about answering it. Only—let me explain first.

"When I last saw you I was an unhappy man, fighting a disease that I suspected was going to claim me. I would not let myself acknowledge that it was conquering me. I persuaded myself — or pretended to—that a change of air and climate would make me over.

"So I went out to California. I soon learned to hate the whole place."

"You were very ill?"

"Yes, hideously ill, with such suffering sometimes as made life almost unendurable.

"I was in a hotel, but I had excellent physicians and nurses. I hired a man to stay with me all the time, an excellent chap—I brought him East with me. I sent him on to Slatesville this morning. He and my housekeeper will get the house ready for my coming.

FOOD AS BODY FUEL

—By Brice Belden, M. D.—

THE wastes of the body may be conceived of as so much smoke and ashes resulting from vital combustion. It is this vital combustion which maintains the animal heat and supplies the energy for bodily activity. The fuel itself is our food. Therefore life may truly be said to be symbolized by a flame.

When we speak of combustion we mean it literally. This combustion is like any other fire except that it gives out no luminous flame, is slower in its manifestation, and goes on in the presence of water—that is, the water of the tissues. The term oxidation applies to either process, except that in the case of the fire in a stove the burning is a rapid affair, and in the case of the body a slow affair.

It should also be said that it is not only the fuel in the form of food that is burned up, but the body itself is slowly consumed, whereas in the case of a fire in a furnace the container does not itself burn. Moreover, the best developed in the former case is of only moderate degree, while a furnace heat is accompanied by intense heat.

Why is the human body not destroyed by vital combustion? It is because of the continual recreation of the tissues from new material supplied by the food, for food furnishes not only fuel for the wonderful human engine, but also repair material for our living machinery.

This is the secret, expressed in the simplest terms, of why we keep warm and why we have so much energy for muscular and other forms of work.

Hints for the Household

Milk that is intended for coffee should be heated very gently, never allowed quite to reach boiling point; if it does, the cream and albumen are lost in the skin that forms, and which many people remove.

* * *

Baked ham is delicious, and such a change from boiled. Wrap it in greased paper and bake it rather slowly, allowing twenty minutes to each pound, and removing the paper for the last twenty minutes to crisp up the fat.

* * *

Cut glass should be washed in lukewarm water which has been softened by the addition of soap, ammonia or washing soda.

* * *

When making fruit jellies add rather less liquid, as a firmer jelly is required to bear the weight of the fruit.

* * *

Most green vegetables should be covered at once with hot water and should be allowed to cook rapidly.

* * *

To brighten windows put a spoonful of vinegar in the water and the glass will take on a bright polish.

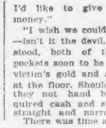
Bachelor Girl's Reflections

BY HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1921, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

AN "old-fashioned girl" is one who resents being kissed until after the first dance.

Marriage is the point at which a man stops saying, "Wait, darling, until I fetch a taxi," and begins saying, "Well, I suppose this rain means I've gotta get a taxi!"



Sometimes a man fails to hear Opportunity's knock at the door, because his wife happens to be knocking so much louder at the same time.

Another "little red diary" is serving as witness in a divorce suit—proving that a woman should write in her diary as cautiously, vaguely and non-committally as a man writes a love letter.

Men say that it's awfully hard to get a job, until you've had one or two and can show references; and by that same token, it's awfully hard to get a husband until you've had one or two and can show wedding rings to prove it.

The hardest feat of life for a modern married couple, is not to succeed in living happily together, but to succeed in getting anybody to believe it.

Every girl clings desperately to her cherished ideal of the perfect and artistic lover—until some young barbarian in a blue serge suit comes along and "cave-mans" her away from it.

A woman's determination to have what she wants is not in the least diminished by the fact that she can't think what it is.

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

I SAW a man the other day whose plight was very doleful; his mind seemed roving far away, his eyes were sad and soulful. He could not lift the poodle up nor water the canary; he could not lead the brindle pup nor call the caseowary. And so I called a doctor out to see what ailed the victim, this doctor was a learned scout, and that was why I picked him. He gazed upon the poodle chap's tongue; he slapped him and he poked him; he pounded him on limb and lung and otherwise provoked him. I waited with an anxious heart to hear him solve the riddle; but, said the doc: "In every part he's fit as any fiddle! His head and heart are both O. K.; his lungs and legs are splendid; he's quite the strongest chap I'll say. I ever have attended. No doubt 'tis ennui makes him yawn and look so sad and seedy, so let him mow the whole back lawn, where it is tall and weedy. For ennui is a dread disease that makes folks most unhappy; they go to pink and purple teas and act morose and snappy." Time proved the wise M. D. was right; that glum man's griefs are over; they make him work from morn till night, and so he lives in clover.

FOR WOMEN OF TASTE

By Rita Stuyvesant—

TRULY Parisienne are the newest undertakings, but with that practical adaptability so necessary to American modes. Silk and crepe nighties, cunning stepins, attractive chemises, and snug vests are all offered as tempting purchases for Christmas shoppers.

Practical petticoats to wear with the Canton crepe or georgette frock are slim models of crepe de chine or Canton crepe in black or navy blue. These are simply pivoted at the bottom, not even risking the bulkiness of a hem, and finished with an elastic at the top. These underskirts are excellent to wear under silk frocks, and make them shadow-proof.

Among the light and dainty underthings there is a lovely night robe of heavy crepe de chine with trimmings of cream net. A simple sleeveless model has the deep square neck and armholes bound with the net and an embroidered butterfly motif at the front. It comes in apricot, turquoise, orchid or flesh and is unusually serviceable.

With the above is a smart chemise in the same shades, trimmed with cream net and butterfly embroidery. It is a step-in model, split up the sides and bound with bias bands. An undervest completes the set.

Another set of underthings is of black glove silk, bound with white glove silk. A silk vest chemise one of those clinging affairs that answer for both vest and chemise, is completed by cunning step-ins, also bound with the white folds.

Smart sets of this type are also offered in pink glove silk with filet trimmings. Many are worn with bloomers instead of the step-ins, while other conservative models are hemstitched.

MARRYING OFF JANE

THE TRIALS OF A BACHELOR GIRL

By Neva Finley Vernes

JANE PALMERSON had known it was coming for weeks. First, because of the new decorations in the living room and gay wicker furniture for the porches. Second, because of Aunt Diana's unexpected arrival and her unflagging interest and devotion. Then, last but not least, there was a gentleman guest every week-end!

She smiled slyly to herself and went serenely about her own business. Dear, gullible and clever as Aunt Diana felt her plans to be, her nieces saw through them quite clearly.

Jane listened, and it was past the dinner hour when she returned home, rosy cheeked and radiant.

"You must look your best tonight, dear," purred Polly. "The professor is interested in you. He admires your common sense. You'd be a little dunce to refuse him." Jane slipped into the green frock without protest.

Perfectly Stunning

"You are perfectly stunning!" cried Vi, clapping her hands. "Won't it be wonderful to have so much money in the family?" Jane only blushed.

The psychological moment has arrived," whispered Dr. Smith, as he bent over Jane, "and, by the way, the combination of auburn tresses and sea green is very, very lovely, but you are always lovely!"

"Friends," said Doctor Amos, as he led Jane to the centre of the merry group, "I have a little surprise for you—Jane and I wish to announce that we're going to be married at last!"

Polly and Vi collapsed in each other's arms. Aunt Diana was stunned.

"That ungrateful girl, after all we've done!" stormed Polly. "Amos Smith is only a poor, shabby——"

"Still, dear, it will be rather nice to have a physician in the family!" signed Aunt Diana.

"Tomorrow."

For sixteen years Amos Smith had been "the boy across the street." There had been a time when she had dared to dream shy, girlish dreams; when she had wanted to be cared for and loved; to be foolish and courted and adored, just as Polly and Vi had been at seventeen! But she had been too busy to keep up the boyish ardor, and after a time it ceased.

"Indeed, I'm looking out for Jane Palmerson from now on," she declared spiritedly, and then, because she could not help it, she confided the whole of her troubles to her companion.

Jane listened, and it was past the dinner hour when she returned home, rosy cheeked and radiant.

"You must look your best tonight, dear," purred Polly. "The professor is interested in you. He admires your common sense. You'd be a little dunce to refuse him." Jane slipped into the green frock without protest.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

Frank A. Vanderlip is busy putting the finishing touches to a book on the ills of Europe, and a proposed remedy he has prepared. He sees good times ahead for the United States, if Europe can be assisted back on her feet. He will give a picture of Europe in an address on Monday. He has since supplemented from an investigation of European conditions, he predicted most of what has since happened. He was then terrifically bearish.

While I don't know, I rather think his utterances this one will be distinctly less pessimistic and will outline a way out of existing difficulties and demoralization.

What was said here last Saturday about President Lincoln's son, Robert T. Lincoln, the personal custodian of the Pullman Company, aroused widespread comment. The most interesting of the letters received is the following from a well-known citizen:

"I read with interest in today's column your divergence on Robert T. Lincoln, because I have often thought he had a right to say more than he did, and if he would only 'loosen up' there is perhaps no man who has enjoyed or experienced some of the incidents he has.

"For example, I have been told on excellent authority that he is the only man Andrew Johnson will recognized the assassination of the three American Presidents. He was in the theatre in Washington the night his father was slain, because I have a New York Herald of April 16, 1865, which reports that he was in the box behind his father.

"He was in Garfield's Cabinet—I think as Secretary of the Interior—and was walking with Garfield and Blaine when Garfield was fired upon.

"He was at the receiving line at the Buffalo Exposition—about three down the line—when McKinley was shot.

"I thought the above might interest you as I think it is one of the oddest experiences have ever heard of, and certainly most unusual.

"Let me take this opportunity of letting you know how much I think of your column. It is, in my opinion, by far the best financial synopsis in any paper or magazine that I know of."

Next to talking about railroads, James J. Hill liked to talk when among good friends about beautiful wife, who has just died after an illness dating from his death in 1916. Mr. Hill was fond of boasting that every time he left home his grip was packed by Mrs. Hill. Also, that she personally darned his socks and sewed on missing buttons. Unlike the wives of a good many men who gain enormous wealth, Mrs. Hill never developed a craze for losing her husband on the jump attending theatres or society functions. She made things pleasant for him, rather than neither he nor she had any disposition to go gadding around. Every morning she got up in time to breakfast with him, and accompany him to his office. Under such home influences, the nine children included no worthless hounders.

I know a few big men would gladly give half their possessions to transform their wives into the Mrs. Hill type. A great many men of tremendous responsibilities complain bitterly that their wives constantly inveigle them into squandering time on empty pleasures and thus injure their capacity for doing worthwhile things. On the other hand, not a few men who have gained notorious publicity through their rise very largely to the encouragement and co-operation supplied by their wives.

A prison roof and walls constitute a fitting shelter for the men of the "trust" found guilty of conspiring to boost prices illegally. When the late J. P. Morgan was indicted, along with Charles S. Mellen in connection with certain New Haven-Boston Transportation matters, he took to bed absolutely inconsolable. When, several years later, William Rockefeller was indicted, along with others, New Haven director, he confided to me one day, in very great confidence, that he not comfortable to be under indictment and to have the possibility of a prison sentence hanging over one.

These incidents are recalled to mind by the suit brought by a protective committee of Denver & Rio Grande railroad stockholders against men who were directors of the road. The Stockholders' Committee petitions the court to compel the directors to account for two hundred million dollars alleged to have been squandered by manipulation, conspiracy, collusion and forced and fictitious sales of railroad property.

It is probably well to have this whole Denver & Rio Grande-Western Pacific matter cleared up to the satisfaction of all parties. While the standard and character of the men named make it hard to believe for a moment that they would have laid themselves open to the charges made, nevertheless the lessons sustained by Denver & Rio Grande security holders have been so heavy that intense bitterness and suspicion have been created. The first purchase of securities I ever made was ten shares of Denver & Rio Grande preferred stock. I paid about $900 for it. I sold it for about $100. Naturally, like other stockholders I feeling that the Denver & Rio Grande got the thin end of the stick in its dealings with the Western Pacific which virtually gobbled up the whole property.

If no suggestion of taint attaches to the Denver & Rio Grande directors, they ought to welcome the receipt of a clean bill of health from the Supreme Court. On the other hand—well, the law take its course.

Seymour L. Cromwell is the most progressive president the New York Stock Exchange has had in a generation. Physically a giant, and in the prime of life, he looks far more not backward. A sidelight on the Exchange's progressive policy is given in the following letter to the Wall Street Journal has written to Richard H. Waldo, of Hearst's International Magazine:

"The Governors of the New York Stock Exchange must know that the affording of such facilities is only one of the steps necessary to the creation of a market, and I want to congratulate you, as I believe that what you are doing is laying a real foundation on which to build a very broad in proportion to the education of all the people."

HOW ONE MAN HELPED BUILD LOS ANGELES

Spillane Tells of Career of Frank Wiggins and His Chamber of Commerce

By RICHARD SPILLANE.

Los Angeles has the best-balanced and most efficient Chamber of Commerce in the United States.

Those who ought to know give credit to Frank Wiggins for making the chamber the great power it is today.

Wiggins is seventy-two. He has a smiling eye, a low, soft voice and doesn't talk unless he has something to say. Men and women about the Chamber of Commerce respect him highly. Some of them will tell you Wiggins would have been a great captain of industry if he had desire for money or if he were not so devoted to his chosen work. Then they'll tell you that everything good in the chamber is his accomplishment, how big a part Wiggins has played in the development of Los Angeles.

That's very well, but I have another side to the Wiggins story that is more important. At least it seems more important to many persons students of character.

When Frank Wiggins went to Los Angeles he was close to death's door. For a year or two or more he had to live in the open air in the dry country. Few persons thought he could live. More than a few knew he had courage, the quiet courage of the truly brave.

For many years for him to recover. He never was robust, but he always was resolute.

Somehow he got interested in Chamber of Commerce work, and today the Los Angeles Chamber is of his fashioning. It is said he has the men of that city so interested in its activities that when a call for $850,000 has to be at a meeting, it's almost certain everyone of those 500 will be present.

The Chamber has played such an important part in the development of the city that everybody is enthusiastic about it.

AN EASY BOSS.

Wiggins manages everything, but you never would know it unless you were right inside. He's an easy boss. He just sits at his desk and thinks and then gives directions. He never gives orders. He is mild of manner but firm. His subordinates carry out his suggestions or directions with pleasure.

"He's the biggest man to Los Angeles," one of his associates said. "He would be a $100,000 a year man in industry, but you couldn't get him to leave here for a million or even a million. He's a dandy."

Wiggins looks a bit like E. J. Cattell, except that he is as florid as the Philadelphian. He wears his mustache in a big way. He is a Republican and West they go the buster they get and it is difficult to tell where Republicanism ends and Democracy begins.

No one can measure the worth of that Chamber of Commerce to Los Angeles. It keeps down and little interests working together all the time for the good of the city, rather than great, powerful organization out of what the general run of cities is a dignified and respectful body.

And it's all because of leadership, the kind of leadership a clear-headed, eagent, purposeful man.

At seventy-two, Wiggins is younger than most men of fifty.

He got married the other day.

WALL ST. GOSSIP

By MONITOR.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Strength in the New York and an increasing number of specialties dominated Friday's stock market. As a general thing, a rise in standard issues is not consistent with a similar movement in isolated stocks throughout the industrial quarter of the market, but this may have been little more than a coincidence. The rails were bought chiefly for investment account as far as the better class of stocks is concerned, and the strength of Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Atchison, Reading and stocks of similar character may be explained on that ground. The movement, however, spread to other rails, where improved prospects of increasing earnings furnished a basis for optimism. Among the railroad stocks of this character were Missouri Pacific preferred, Colorado & Southern and Wabash A preferred. With reference to this latter stock, there has been a good deal of favorable comment lately.

AMONG the specialties that advanced sharply were Kennecott, largely on short covering; Allied Chemical, American Woolen, Hide & Leather preferred and Gen Elevator.

OILS and Coppers showed more strength. Mexican Petroleum was quite strong and Pacific Oil and Pierce Oil advanced on heavy transactions. Texas Gulf Sulphur preferred was up four points. It was natural that the general strength in the market should cause a much heavier tone in the steel shares, but aside from this sympathetic influence there was no apparent influence to account for the moderate gains established by them.

BUYING of the railroad stocks which featured the trading was largely for legitimate investment account. For some time past important interests have been buying the better class of dividend-paying stocks, together with some of the lower-priced preferred issues. These purchases have been taken out of the market with a resulting reduction of supply. There has been a state short interest of considerable proportions, which is constantly drifting in obtaining offerings to cover its commitments.

COLORADO SOUTHERN has been under accumulation for a long time. The buying is based on a very favorable showing to be made this year. The company taps the Mexia field, and in well-informed quarters it is estimated that earnings for the present year will approximate $12 per share. The controlling interests are the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, and in important quarters it is said that Colorado Southern will be given a 4 per cent. dividend early this year in order to maintain the Burlington dividend and the Northern Pacific dividend.

TEXAS & PACIFIC has been under accumulation by important interests, and this buying has become more open since the settlement of the controversy with the Missouri Pacific. It is reported that powerful bankers are buying both Missouri Pacific preferred and Texas & Pacific, and that Missouri Pacific itself is increasing its holdings of Texas Pacific.

BUYING in Northern Pacific has been in such measure due to the completed dividend action of Colorado Southern. Should this latter company declare a dividend as now seems probable, it will settle any question as to the immediate future of Northern Pacific dividends.

ALLIED CHEMICAL & DYE and Mathieson Alkali advanced rapidly, the former on the announcement of a definitive group which controls it. Several months ago there was a similar movement some of the companies in Allied Chemical were about to withdraw from the combination and traders were on the stock short. This old short interest took fright and began to cover, and other chemical stocks and covered its commitments at advancing quotations.

THE steel stocks generally were strong as were the equipments. Some buying covering indications for the movement in the former and this was helped by trade statistics as the improvement is reported. It is understood contracts thus far made for 1922 are of larger aggregate size than any one year.

Inquiries in the market are from the New York Central for from 150,000 to 200,000 tons, the same for 150,000 tons and in the export trade the Argentine is reported to make quotations on 70,000 tons, while inquiries from China and Japan total about 15,000 tons.

ONE of the newcomers to the Stock Exchange was Texas Gulf Sulphur, which is the largest sulphur producing company in the world. The initial dealings on Wednesday on the curb was at 33 1-2, and the first transaction on the stock exchange on Thursday morning was at 33 7-8. Two of the members of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. are on the board of directors. Last week the company declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1 per share, and an extra dividend of the same amount.

THE ADRIATIC arrived from London with gold valued at $900,000 consigned to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Vessels from Continental and South American ports brought $54,514 in gold currency, eleven bars of gold and platinum valued at $3,000.

UNION PACIFIC sold at a new high price for the year, when transactions were made fractionally above 131. The buying in this stock, as in Atchison and other high-grade railroads, was for investment account. The rapidly advancing bond market has brought the income yield of prime railroad securities to the favorable attention of investors.

PROSPECTS FOR DECEMBER NOT ENCOURAGING

Business Dangers Will Be Abated by Just How Liquidation Progresses, Says Evans

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—There are strong people in the city who profess to face that ogre, December, with confidence, piercing as they do the clouds and darkness with which he has enveloped himself time out of mind.

Experience with the old fellow is the reverse of encouraging to speculators in stocks, and indeed to many classes of merchants, manufacturers and distributors. This attitude argues much courage, especially as there are many who fear what is coming to them at the turn of the year. In January and a little later banks holding maturing paper become more critical, in view of the protracted period during which they have carried these customers, and in view also of the facts that will appear in the annual statements.

SHAKE-OUT PROCESS.

But by as much as liquidation has already occurred by so much are the dangers of December and January abated. There is a chance now to view it is largely a question in what ratio to the January figure in the East has the settling-up process in the West occurred, for as the metropolis continues to become more concentrated in the public by the large institutions, whereas throughout the West there is a wholesaling-out process constantly going on.

So much has been achieved, but to be accurate it is impossible to tell how much is left to be done. Changing conditions bring about changing views, and only the morals of the world there is still greater reason for deep thoughtfulness on one part. We have not yet been "swamped" with the products of German industry, nor are we getting enough of an admonition of what may happen to justify us in taking alarm.

WHAT EUROPE CAN DO.

Europe is capable of giving us a tremendous competition in the neutral markets, and of offering to us manufactured goods on such a large scale that we can compete even with our own mills and to throw many American operatives out of work. Not so much in the unskilled, unskilfully applied through a period of years before the war, to increase constantly our export trade, as in the skilled.

And ever is there a danger of industry and commerce in there in the matter of legislation. Much anxiety has been caused among the broader business men of the country by the failure to abandon the doctrine that the I. C. C. has jurisdiction over intra-State railroad rates.

There have been some hearings in Washington on the subject, and the witnesses say there is a large element in Congress, under control of the agricultural bloc, showing much favor toward the Capper scheme. If it succeeds we again shall have the puzzling situation of one State with a low proportion of forty-nine governments.

Yet we notice Lee Higginson & Co. turn to the 4th if it will—the dominant sentiment is one of hope, but it is a hope tempered by the caution by the broker's call to his customers to buy stocks.

The specialties which have recently walked into the New York atmosphere, Davison Chemical, an issue of sterling merit, and Kennecott, has been bought here rather freely.

Boston Financial Notes

Trading on the Boston Stock Exchange was unusually active for the week ending with today's session, with sales of exceeding 800,000 shares. Many issues showed a gain of more than a point for the day last.

The week end of August the Carson Hill Gold Mining Company had a production of $668,153 and a profit of $300,000 for the month.

The Canadian Pacific Railway is to run the Montreal-Boston night express through to Boston, instead of to Newport, Vt., and those trains, according to Vice President Beatty, of the road, will carry passengers as well as freight.

The Boston Elevated Railway for the October Massachusetts Gas subsidiaries show combined net earnings of $1,000,000.

Dividends declared: Boston Wharf Co., 3 per cent, payable December 1. Fears for the dividend on the common have weakened that issue on stock exchanges.

BOOK TITLES OFFER REAL BRAIN TEST

Experience In Past Contests Will Undoubtedly Benefit Present Participants

E. M., of Providence, writes to the Book Test Editor to ask if, in his opinion, a reader who participated in the Movie Play Title Test and the Songs of the World Test is not more likely to finish among the leaders in the Book Test than one who is tackling our artist for the first time.

As a general rule, one would say "Yes." Certainly the quick, eager, intelligent reader would have had his eyes opened by the Movie Play Title Test, would have done much better in the Song Title Test, and should carry home the turkey from the present party.

EXPERIENCE COUNTS.

Experience should count, of course, in this as in other things. Which reminds of a Turkish proverb, good enough to print here or anywhere else, even though it has no bearing on our job. "Experience" runs the proverb, "is the comb handed to us by Destiny when our hair is gone."

The Boston American's $1,000 Book Title Picture Test is a competition of skill, wit and cleverness between some thousands of readers and a Great Unknown artist, the gentleman who draws these pictures.

The Test will consist of Sixty Drawings, of which the sixteenth is before you.

Each drawing represents the TITLE of a book. They are not supposed to have any reference whatever to the CONTENTS of the books. Because he forgot this, with respect to two pictures, we have published the fact that the title of Drawing No. 5 in this Test is "Robinson Crusoe" and the title of Drawing No. 8 "Rip Van Winkle."

Write a title for each drawing. Hold until the close of the Test. When the pictures are to be sent in all together at one time.

$5,000 IN AWARDS.

The Boston American will pay the following awards to the 219 readers who, at the close of the Test, send in the largest numbers of Correct Titles:

One First Award	$1,000
One Second Award	750
One Third / ard	500
One Four Award	400
One Fifti. Award	300
One Sixth Award	200
One Seventh Award	150
One Eighth Award	100
One Ninth Award	50
100 Awards of $10 each	1,000
(10 Awards of $5 each	550
Total	$5,000

WATCH YOUR STEP.

Every day there will be printed with the Test Drawing a List of Titles containing among others the Correct Title of the day's picture. One title — the List will fit the picture better than any other title in the list. Watch your step! A title may "appear" to fit, and not be within miles of the CORRECT title. When the Test is over, if not obvious, does not come quickly and bring a feeling of certainty, by study or inquire.

Every reader of the Boston American residing in New England or Canada may take part in the Book Test and earn any of the above awards. It is not necessary to own a big dictionary in order to take even the $1,000 award. It probably will be necessary to have access to one. Those who finished highest in the preceding Tests explained to the Test Editor that they made several visits to the Public Library. Every public library is equipped with the latest in dictionaries.

TEST FOR CLEVER FOLK.

A real test, for clever folk who know words and their meanings or, at least, are not too tired to investigate.

The money is here, waiting. It belongs to those who shall earn it. It may be spread all over Boston American territory, from Providence to Ottawa, from Bar Harbor to New London. It might find happy homes in one street in Boston. You never can tell. All depends upon the Book reading!

NEWMAN TRAVEL TALK SHOWS JAP INVASION

Some idea of how the Japanese and Hindus are "peacefully penetrating" on the west coast of Canada may be gleaned from the Newman's travelTalk, at Symphony Hall, on "the Canadian Rockies."

It's pictures show the large number of Japanese, who are monopolizing the fishing industry of Vancouver and other fishing centres, and the Hindus are replacing white lumbermen.

Mr. Newman points out that the Hindus work for lower wages than Americans.

His views of the Canadian Rockies, the beautiful lakes and glaciers strike one with awe—they are simply wonderful.

"The Canadian Rockies" was again the programme for today.

MARSHAL FOCH IS GUEST OF TWIN CITIES

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 26. — Marshal Ferdinand Foch was today the guest of the Twin Cities. A special program was arranged in his honor. He leaves tonight for Bismarck, N. D.
